

Puddle play

Most people avoid puddles, but nothing else can be as much fun or as cool on a warm morning for a youngster. Lisa, left, and Leslie Tubbs found this puddle on East Saline a good place to play Thursday morning. Their mother, Mrs. Larry Tubbs, Hughesville, brought the girls to Sedalia to visit relatives.

Troop reduction denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate refused today to require a 200,000-man reduction in the 485,000 American troops deployed overseas.

A troop-cut amendment by Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, was defeated by voice vote, with only a few senators on the floor.

Votes were scheduled for later today on amendments to cut funding for such major new weapons systems as the B1 bomber, the AWACS flying radar system and additional advanced intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Turned down Wednesday were attempts to impose an over-all $1.2 billion cut in weapons procurement and research and to stop technology development for programs to increase the accuracy and yield of land-and sea-based missiles.

The votes came after appeals by President Ford, Vice President Nelson A.

Rockefeller and Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger in commencement addresses to maintain U.S. military strength.

Ford, at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., counseled against cuts in what he called the 'bedrock defense budget' to show world leaders "that Americans have lost neither their nerve nor their national will."

At the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., Rockefeller said America must pursue both the path of detente and a program of rebuilding its military strength to match the increasing military growth of the Soviet Union around the world.

At the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., Schlesinger said U.S. military power must be maintained "until ... the Soviet Union accepts the permanence and legitimacy of Western social order."

In the first Senate test, a $1.2 billion over-all reduction proposed by Sens. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was defeated 59 to 36.

After closed-door debate for an hour and 40 minutes, the Senate turned down 52 to 42 an amendment by Sens. Thomas McIntyre, D-N.H., and Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., to deny funds for further research and improve accuracy and yield of land-and sea-based nuclear warhead missiles.

In an unclassified statement inserted in the Senate record, McIntyre said the accuracy yield programs would give the United States the option of attacking specific targets, such as Soviet ICBM silos, instead of whole cities.

"They shift us from a policy of deterring nuclear war to doctrines and technologies designed to fight limited nuclear war," he said.

School employes bid for jobless benefits

Since the end of school, the state unemployment office here has handled an estimated 350 claims from Pettis County teachers and other school employes seeking jobless benefits.

Bill Giles, manager of the Missouri Division of Employment Security office, said Wednesday an estimated 160 of those are from the Sedalia school system.

The program is part of the federal Supplemental Unemployment Assistance Act, which Congress passed to help combat the recession. It includes teachers on normal summer vacation among those eligible for unemployment compensation.

Some officials say the provision is a "loophole" that was left open by mistake and will soon be closed. The Missouri General Assembly declined Tuesday to do so itself, saying it was up to Congress.

Giles said an estimated 600 teachers and school employes have applied for benefits in the three-county area covered by his office. Besides Pettis, this includes Johnson and Morgan Counties. He said about 10 teachers were in his conference room Wednesday afternoon applying for the benefits.

Maximum payment under the program is $85 a week, Giles said. He added that teachers and other school employes, even though they have contracts for the fall, would qualify. The only exception would be those on vacation or in summer school who would not be available to take jobs, he added.

Dr. Allan Henningsen, superintendent of schools, said administrators "have stayed out of this completely," except to provide space for teachers to meet with state unemployment officials.

Henningsen added that he was "philosophically opposed" to paying jobless benefits to teachers and other employes who are out on normal summer breaks.

"There just is very little legitimacy to it as far as I am concerned," the superintendent added. However, he said he could understand how some teachers on the low end of the pay scale would rush to take advantage of the federal program as long as its available.

Henningsen said about 270 teachers and between 100 and 150 other employes of the school district would be eligible for the payments.

Wallace's absence raises questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some national Democratic officials question Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace's motives in refusing to join other top Democrats at a major party fund-raiser in New York next week.

Wallace's decision followed a behind-the-scenes dispute that began when his name didn't appear on the invitation for the $500-a-plate dinner on June 12.

National chairman Robert S. Strauss and other national party officials said a Wallace aide hadn't given them a go-ahead in time to include Wallace on the invitation. The Wallace aide said he had.

The dinner is the first of several that seek to raise some $1.6 million to pay for the television time during the party's July 26-27 fundraising telethon.

Report reveals

Troop build-up seen in Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Communist North Korea has moved strong armored forces close to the demilitarized boundary with South Korea, U.S. intelligence sources report.

Pentagon officials watching the situation said they are concerned but not alarmed and that no special alerts were ordered for U.S. troops in South Korea. Officials noted that the North Koreans have made threatening moves from time to time without launching any major military action against South Korea since 1953.

However, there has been some worry recently that North Korea might be emboldened to test the U.S. commitment to South Korea following the collapse of American-backed governments in Indochina.

Intelligence specialists said the new concentration of north Korean armor near the DMZ is the biggest there in a long time.

The equivalent of an armored division was reported in the Kok San area about 40 miles north of the DMZ near the traditional invasion corridor into South Korea. U.S. sources counted about 250 tanks and assault guns and some 100 armored troop carriers.

South Korea's army, which gained some combat experience in the Vietnam war, is deployed along the DMZ in the main defensive positions intended to stop an invasion from the North.

The one U.S. Army division in South Korea is strategically located to help block any invasion before it reaches Seoul, the capital. Nuclear-armed U.S. missile and artillery batteries also back up South Korean divisions.

Egypt reopens canal with large fanfare

PORT SAID, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat reopened the Suez Canal today as a "tributary of peace and a channel of prosperity and cooperation among men." But he vowed to liberate all Arab lands from Israeli occupation.

Sadat said Egypt, in reopening the canal, wanted to "remind friendly people everywhere that cherished parts of Arab land are still suffering under foreign occupation and Arab people are enduring the anguish of forced exile."

Egypt is determined "to perform the sacred duty of liberating" these lands and recovering usurped Arab rights," he declared.

Wearing his white naval uniform as commander of the Egyptian navy, Sadat proclaimed the waterway "completely cleared and purged of Israeli aggression following our glorious crossing of the canal Oct. 6, 1973."

"It is only natural that this Egyptian artery should continue to serve the prosperity of mankind and return to its role of linking the four corners of the world, promoting trade and harmony among people and nations," he declared.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Transport Minister Gad Yaacobi said Egypt had pledged in writing to permit Israeli cargoes through the canal. He said a Liberian ship headed for the Suez with sugar for Israel would be "a test case."

Yaacobi told Radio Israel that Egypt agreed to let Israeli cargoes through the canal in the disengagement pact with Israel signed last January.

"Without any doubt this is a part of the disengagement of forces agreement," he said. "It was a commitment given by Egypt to the United States, in writing."

In two days of celebrations, Sadat will travel the length of the waterway linking the Mediterranean and the Red Sea.

After the celebrations, shipping convoys will start moving through the 106-year-old canal. The first will have only seven ships, but the Egyptian government is hopeful that eventually business will at least return to the 1967 level of 60 ships a day.

Sadat was host to several hundred official guests for the celebration, including 14-year-old Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi of Iran, whose father, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, has given Egypt more than a billion dollars since the October 1973 war with Israel.

Israel in an unexpected conciliatory move this week pulled back half of its troops and tanks and all of its artillery and missiles on its desert front line 12 miles east of the canal.

Sadat welcomed the Israeli move, but its unexpectedness was underlined Wednesday night by a Beirut broadcast in which he belligerently warned the Israelis that any blow at the canal or its cities would be met with a missile attack on Israel.

The broadcast had been recorded last week, before announcement of the partial Israeli pullback improved the atmosphere.

Recognizing the easing of tensions in the area, London underwriters decided to reduce the insurance surcharge on ships and cargo going through the canal.

Meaty prize at stake for father's day baby

A bundle of beef will go along with a bundle of joy at Bothwell Hospital on Father's Day.

The first baby born at the hospital that day will win a roast beef, matching the baby's weight ounce for ounce, for his or her parents.

The West Central CowBelles, Ionia, an auxiliary of the Missouri Cattlemen's Association, will present the roast to promote beef use on Father's Day, according to Mrs. Waldo Wheeler, Windsor, who is in charge of the presentation.

The CowBelles will supply the roast,

she said, as the group has done at other area hospitals in previous years.

The hospital will notify Mrs. James Labahn, Route 4, Sedalia, a member of the auxiliary, of the winner, Mrs. Wheeler said.

The presentation is not limited to Pettis County residents, she said, adding that if no babies are born at Bothwell on Father's Day, the roast will go to the parents of the first baby born there after that day.

Mrs. Wheeler's husband is president of the Missouri Cattlemen's Association.

Church critical of CIA wording

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate intelligence committee says he resents the CIA's use of terms like "elimination with extreme prejudice" and "executive action" to describe murder plots against foreign leaders.

"Everyone understands 'murder,'" Sen. Frank Church said Wednesday after asserting that his committee has "hard evidence" of CIA involvement in assassination plots.

"I prefer the plain spoken language. These other words are intended to obfuscate what is in fact going on," Church said following a closed-door session with CIA Director William E. Colby.

Church said his 10-member panel will concentrate on the issue of assassination before moving on to other areas of its investigation of the CIA, FBI and other U.S. intelligence agencies.

"I believe it is most important that the other work of the committee be set aside until his matter is put to rest," he said.

Church promised a full disclosure of evidence regarding CIA involvement in assassination plots but declined to say whether that would include public hearings.

The intelligence panel appears to be concentrating its investigation on an alleged 1961 CIA plot involving underworld figures Sam Giancana and John Roselli in plans to kill Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

In releasing a list of committee witnesses, Church revealed the names of several persons who have figured in published accounts of the Giancana-Roselli plot.

Church made a point of noting that the committee has evidence of more than one murder plot, but he refused to give any indication of how many plots were involved, whether any other foreign leaders besides Castro had been the target or whether any assassinations had been attempted.

However, Church did clear up confusion surrounding reports that the committee also is planning a probe of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The hard evidence of CIA involvement in assassination plots "has no direct connection with the assassination of President Kennedy," Church assured reporters.

Church indirectly feuded with Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller over their respective impressions of CIA wrongdoing.

Rockefeller earlier this week said the presidential panel which he heads had found instances of illegal activity by the CIA but that "in comparison to the total effect they are not major."

Church said Wednesday, "I regard (evidence of CIA involvement in murder plots) as a very serious matter."

Rockefeller later said that Church had misinterpreted his earlier statement, but Church refused to retract his criticism.

Msgr. Kearney and tomatoes

Priest has praise for tomatoes

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Msgr. Vincent S. Kearney, pastor of Christ the King Catholic Church, doesn't talk to his tomatoes. He just opens the church windows and the tomatoes hear a "whole lot of singing and preaching."

Monsignor Kearney's tomato patch, which he has been tending next to the church for 10 years, is his sidewalk showpiece.

Each year since he started, the monsignor has produced larger tomatoes faster than most average garden crops in town.

"For a while," he said, "I thought I had a real, genuine miracle, or at least a mystery. Then one night I noticed that the big mercury vapor parking light just happened to be directly over my tomato patch. Some people say that the light makes my tomatoes grow so fast."

His 10 to 12 plants are planted in a narrow plot of lawn between a hedge and the church window from which he watches the reactions of parishioners to his signs next to the plants, such as, "Soul Food," "God's Little Acre," "Bless This Mess," "Thou Shalt Not Disturb These Holy Tomatoes—Unless You're Hungry" and "Holy Land, Holy Water and a Holy Farmer."

Some neighbors have tied oranges and apples on the vines, and even a banana. Once, a fellow priest had friends sow watermelon seeds among his tomatoes.

"In about six weeks," Msgr. Kearney recalled, laughing, "I had the biggest, greenest, funniest tomatoes you've ever

City spending soars

50 years can make a big difference

By RON JENNINGS
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

It didn't cost nearly as much to run the city back in the mid-1920s — and Glen M. Kell Sr., who was a Second Ward councilman at the time, recalled one of the main reasons why.

"The first police car this city ever had didn't cost us one cent when they picked it up about that time," he said. "They found a Ford Model T touring car deserted on one of the streets in town. I guess it was probably abandoned. We tried for a while to find out who owned it. And I guess you might say we never did try too hard."

Although the car was second-hand, police were usually able to catch about anybody they needed to "because what everybody else had around here wasn't much better," Kell continued. "The police used that car for 10 years."

When they weren't roaming the streets in the "acquired" automobile, which in those days was still most of the time, the city's six-man police force walked daily beats 12 hours a day, six days a week for $65 a month. The chief received $10 more per month.

"And," Kell said, "they were glad to do it. In those days, that wasn't really bad money."

City firemen, like their police department counterparts, were also living through an era of change in the twenties. Fuel cost 20 cents a gallon and the city's first pumper firetruck, a bright-red, standard-transmission American General made in St. Louis, was purchased in the middle of the decade for $10,000.

(Fifty years later, city fathers in 1974 approved the purchase of a 100-foot Seagraves yellow

Vintage recollections

Glenn M. Kell Sr., Sedalia city councilman in the mid-1920's, remembers when it cost a lot less to run the city than it does today ... but the problem of insufficient funds was there even in those days, he said.

(Democrat-Capital Photo)

City street and alley department employees, all two of them, received 25 cents an hour and worked a six-day week at the rate of 10 hours per day. The same rate held for all other city employees. Were there any objections?

"They knew what they would get and that was that," Kell said. "Back then, they had to be reappointed every year. So they knew that they had to measure up each time if they wanted to keep their jobs. If they didn't, we could always find somebody else."

The total city operating budget in those days, Kell indicated, hovered between $50,000 and $70,000, a far cry from the current budget of $3,345,000.

Even with this comparatively small budget, however, things didn't always go according to plan, Kell indicated.

"One time we had to borrow $20,000 during the last month before taxes came in to meet the bills," he said. "We paid this back and managed to come out of it. It was just something we were forced to do."

Other comparisons between city costs during the last half of 1925 and now:

From July through December, 1974, the city spent $214,158.09 on fire protection, which is more than 20 times the $10,229.10 spent during the last six months of 1925. Also, in the second half of 1925, the city allocated more money on fire protection than on the police department, which received $8,215.29.

Fifty years later, this situation was reversed as a total of $236,384.37 was spent on the police department. This figure was $228,169.08 more than the $8,215.29 spent from July through December five decades ago.

Other figures for the two half-year periods reveal that $57,495.59 was spent on city street lighting during the last six months of 1974. This amount is nearly eight times more than the $7,505.35 spent on lighting in 1925. One other interesting note is that, in 1925, the city's six-month total lighting expenditure was only $709.94 less than the amount spent for the police department. By 1974, this difference had climbed to $178,888.78.

Now 81, Kell is content to view such financial figures from the comfort of his favorite front-room chair and let his son, Mack Jr., president of the Sedalia Board of Education, worry about spending the public's money.

"Things all cost a lot more nowadays, it seems," he said. "But that just seems to be the life story for everyone. I'm just glad it's none of my concern now."

Survival kit

By ERMA BOMBECK

No one knows what their life expectancy is, but I have a horror of leaving this world and not having anyone in the entire family know how to replace a toilet tissue spindle.

It's an awesome thought to have four grown people wandering around in a daze saying, "I thought she told you how," and another saying, "If I knew she was sick I'd have paid attention."

The tissue spindle isn't the only home skill that has been mastered by no one at our house. Consequently, I have put together a simple family survival manual when Mom is away ... even for a weekend.

REPLACING TOILET TISSUE SPINDLE: Grasp old spindle and push gently to one side where there is a spring action. The spindle will release and you discard the old cardboard. Slip on new roll and insert one end of spindle in the spring action side and listen for a click into place.

WASHING TOOTHPASTE

OFF SIDE OF WASHBOWL: Before toothpaste is allowed to harden-become a permanent part of the enamel, swish water from faucet over affected areas and give a gentle nudge with washcloth or hands. Sink will be ready for next slobee.

TURNING ON STOVE: Hot meals require a hot stove. If the stove is gas, ignite by turning dial or handle and hold match over burner. If stove is electric, take forefinger and push firmly on button of desired heat. Caution: Do not put food directly on burner, but put it in a pan first.

CLOSING A DOOR: This looks harder than it is. When door is ajar, make sure it is free of foreign objects (children, feet of salesmen or packages), then grasp it firmly by the handle and give it a push until you hear it click. Slamming the door will not make it close any firmer than a push.

TURNING OFF A LIGHT: The same principle is used in turning off a light as it is turning it on. If it is a wall switch, you flick the switch up or down until you no longer see the light.

If it is a chain mechanism, you compress chain between thumb and forefinger and give it a tug. The light will extinguish.

OPERATING A CLOTHES HAMPER: Don't be intimidated because there are no dials or instructions on the lid. Bending from the waist, you simply pick up a sock, a pair of pants, or a towel, lift the lid of the hamper and feed soiled clothes into it. The Good Fairy will take it from there.

Keep this manual handy for easy references. After all, if I have to take these skills with me when I go ... I'm not going!

Gas shortage threatens plants

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Some industrial plants in Missouri may be forced to shut down this year because of the growing natural gas shortage, the state's natural resources chief, James Wilson, says.

A state survey of large gas customers released Wednesday found that 8 per cent of 141 users would be forced to close their plants if gas were curtailed.

The Missouri Energy Agency survey was made of 1,188 "interruptible" commercial and industrial users. Interruptible customers purchase gas at a lower price but don't receive a firm contract for their gas supply.

About half of the state's commercial and industrial users are interruptible.

State energy officials were "startled" to hear that about 80 per cent of the users were planning to switch to fuels that were growing more scarce and costly.

"We cannot expect to replace these very large quantities of natural gas with equally large quantities of oil and propane. It simply cannot be done," Wilson said in prepared remarks to be delivered Thursday morning in Columbia.

Wilson predicted that the full impact of the growing natural gas shortage should hit Missouri within two or three years. He said many workers may be put out of work, but couldn't estimate the numbers.

About one third of the state's energy comes from natural gas.

"Interruptible users now face the threat of total curtailment as their supplies of domestic sources of natural gas are gradually exhausted," Wilson said.

He called on large customers to discontinue natural gas use for heating. About 60 per cent of those responding to the survey said they used gas for heating, while 17 per cent said they use the gas for industrial purposes.

Politicians hamper plan for airport

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The location of a regional airport for St. Louis may continue to be a political football between Illinois and Missouri politicians for a number of years, some speakers agreed during a public hearing Wednesday.

The series of hearings on a proposed $144.7 million master plan for Lambert St. Louis International Airport concludes tonight in St. Louis County.

Wednesday's speakers were closely divided on the issue of expanding facilities at Lambert or proceeding with plans for an airport at Columbia-Waterloo, Ill.

Mayor John Poelker of St. Louis said he views the Illinois site as "a threat to the city and the state."

But remarks by Poelker and County Supervisor Gene McNary in favor of the master plan were countered by former St. Louis Mayor Alfonso J. Cervantes and Joseph L. Badaracco, former president of the St. Louis Board of Aldermen.

Summing up the issue, Badaracco said Missouri politicians unanimously favor Lambert expansion while Illinois politicians unanimously favor Columbia-Waterloo.

"We need someone to look at it without political ramifications," he said.

"I think we ought to resolve the question in a hurry. It seems best that if Lambert cannot suffice we should move and create a new airport over at Waterloo."

J.W. Marriott Jr., president of the Marriott Corp., which operates a motor hotel near Lambert, said his hotel could not survive the closing of Lambert and that decay would come fast in the wake of an airport relocation.

"So much goes down the drain — a colossal waste of facilities and services and conveniences and support," Marriott said.

Food prices hit skids, survey shows

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Grocery store prices for most major food items took a sharp slide in the shopper's favor this week, according to the Missouri Farm Bureau.

Some of the largest price drops came in beef, pork, milk and bread, the bureau's survey of stores across the state found.

A pound of ground beef fell from 88 cents to 78 cents, while T-bone steak dropped from $2.35 to $2.20 a pound.

Round steaks were reduced from $1.90 to $1.68 a pound, and sirloin dropped from $2.14 to $1.97. Among the lower priced meats, blade roast came down from $1.05 to 94 cents a pound, while arm roast fell from $1.34 to $1.22.

The biggest drop in pork prices came in center cut chops, down from $1.87 to $1.71. Pork blade roast declined from $1.25 to $1.12 a pound, and pork steak dipped from $1.21 to $1.17.

Among hams, shank portions dropped seven cents to 85 cents a pound and butt portions were down nine cents to 96 cents.

A gallon of milk plummeted from $1.59 to $1.43, while lowfat milk came down 14 cents to $1.35.

A one and one-half pound loaf of white bread dropped from 67 cents to 58 cents.

Among poultry products, whole fryer chickens were three cents lower to 51 cents a pound. Cut-up chickens were reduced from 62 to 58 cents.

A dozen extra large eggs declined from 75 cents to 64 cents, with large eggs dropping nine cents to 60 cents. Medium eggs were reduced from 61 cents to 52 cents a dozen.

Red potatoes was the only surveyed item to rise, jumping from $1.21 to $1.46 for a 10-pound bag.

A 10-pound bag of cane sugar dropped from $3.59 to $3.14.

DON'T SIPHON GAS

OTTAWA (AP) — Consumers' Association of Canada reports that motorists risk serious injury and possible death if they use their mouths to siphon gasoline from one car gas tank to another. If a mouthful of gasoline is swallowed, nausea and vomiting may result. Serious lung damage can be caused by sucking the gas into the lungs. If siphoning is necessary, use a hand pump.

Drug relieves arthritis pains

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have been taking Motrin for several months and find it gives me great relief from arthritic pain. I find many of my friends are doing the same with good results. Can you tell me how long it has been on the market? So far I have had no side effects which is very unusual for me. Is there any harm in continued use of this drug? Does it have a beneficial effect on joints or is it just a pain killer?

Dear Reader — It appears that Motrin or ibuprofen is the new "in" drug to treat arthritis. Wait awhile and it may not be so "in." Right now it is enjoying the popularity of a new drug.

It was used in Canada for almost 18 months before it was recently approved for marketing in the United States. You can think of it as a substitute for aspirin.

The most common use of Motrin is for relief of pain. As with usual doses of aspirin, the amounts used to relieve pain in osteoarthritis don't alter the disease, but do make living a lot more pleasant. In larger doses Motrin is said to have an anti-inflammatory effect, meaning it helps to relieve the inflammation that occurs in rheumatoid arthritis.

I'm delighted that you have had such good success so far with Motrin, and I'm sure many patients will be pleased with its results. Certainly you should continue it unless your doctor decides to change your medications.

Not all the reports on Motrin are as enthusiastic as those of its manufacturer. The Medical Letter for Physicians (December 20, 1974) points out that the amount required to be "as effective as usual doses of aspirin in the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis and/or osteoarthritis" is larger than those used in most of the studies of the drug in terms of safety.

The Medical Letter also reports that in larger doses it has caused gastritis and other disorders of the digestive system. Visual disturbances have been noted as have headache and mental confusion. The drug is not recommended for use during pregnancy but osteoarthritis usually doesn't become a problem during the years most women are pregnant.

The Medical Letter report goes even further and states... at the present time Medical Letter consultants do not consider ibuprofen a reasonable alternative to previously available anti-arthritis drugs. They conclude that the usual recommended dose is less toxic than aspirin but also less effective, and think longer term

Pot planes aren't staying high

By MARTIN MERZER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Every day about 150 airplanes laden with marijuana cross the borders of the United States, and federal officials say a growing number of them aren't completing their illicit missions.

"The pilots come a dime-a-dozen. Whether they can fly is immaterial," Jacques Kiere, director of a federal drug enforcement intelligence agency, said Wednesday.

Kiere said his agency, the El Paso (Texas) Intelligence Center, knows of 49 crashes since Jan. 1 involving planes smuggling marijuana into this country. "While many of those crashes occurred in other countries, all involved planes connected with marijuana traffic in the United States," he said.

Officials attribute the number of failed missions to the greed and inexperience of smugglers and enforcement efforts of local and federal officers.

"The smugglers tend to overload their planes, and the pilots often land on undeveloped strips and pieces of road," Kiere said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats who lost their attempt to override President Ford's veto of a jobs bill are talking of more modest legislation and of how right they were in not labeling the present Congress veto-proof.

The Democratic House majority failed by five votes Wednesday to override the veto of a $5.3-billion bill designed to provide 900,000 publicly financed jobs for the unemployed. The vote was 277 to 145; a two-thirds majority was needed to override.

A group of Republicans has introduced a $2.3-billion bill, some $265 million above Ford's recommendations, but said they thought it would be acceptable to the White House. Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and other Democrats said they expect other substitute legislation to be introduced. There was some talk of trying to attach it to a bill, like one to extend U.S. Treasury borrowing power, that would be hard to veto.

Democratic leaders, who had made the vetoed bill a symbol of their quarrel with Ford's economic policies, did not hide their disappointment at the outcome.

"Unfortunately and disappointingly," Speaker Carl Albert called it. He predicted Republicans would be hurt as a result of the veto, "but more important it will hurt the country."

O'Neill commented, "Today an unelected President and a Republican minority of the House denied 900,000 people the opportunity of employment. It is a sad day for America."

"It continues the veto tyranny he (Ford) has over the House," commented Rep. John J. McFall of California, the Democratic whip.

and some Democrats campaigned in 1974 for a party majority big enough to override the vetoes then-President Richard M. Nixon was exercising. However, no party leaders claimed after the election that a veto-proof Congress had been achieved.

Republicans, including Ford, have used the phrase to needle and sometimes to blame the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Until a death reduced their ranks by one, Democrats had exactly a two-to-one advantage in the House — 290 to 145. But since party ranks, especially those of the Democrats, are rarely absolutely solid, this was not considered to constitute a veto-proof House. The Senate, divided 61 to 38 with one seat

Enforcement Agency in Miami, said a major operation by Jamaican and American agents last year dealt a severe blow to the Jamaican marijuana industry.

The mission, dubbed Operation Buccaneer, ended with the confiscation of 730,000 pounds of marijuana and 8,083 pounds of marijuana seeds, Costa said.

As a result, smugglers began concentrating on the Colombian and Mexican brands.

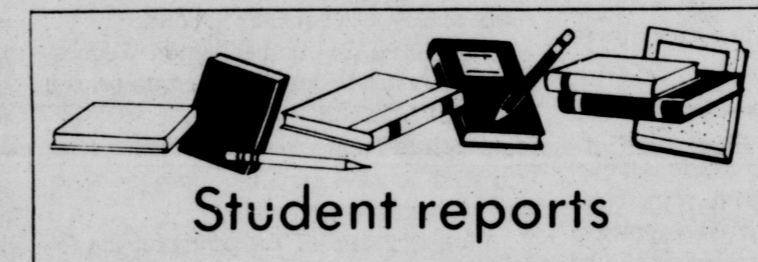

To carry the marijuana that far, smugglers needed long-range, large-payload, dependable machines. Enter the World War II B25, Lockheed Lodestar and Constellation airplanes.

"The bombers can carry pot in the bomb bays, which are doubly effective because if the pilot suspects he is being followed he can dump the stuff before we catch up or just pass low over trucks or whatever and make the delivery without even landing," Kiere said.

For people seeking to make a lot of money quick, marijuana smuggling offers large rewards at comparatively little risk.

Pot retails on the street for about $300 a pound, depending on quality and location. It can

Last year, only about 1,700 persons were arrested for trafficking in marijuana, said Ted Swift, a spokesman for the DEA in Miami.

Student reports

The name of David Solomon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Solomon, 904 Leone, was inadvertently omitted from the list of 1974 honor graduates of Smith-Cotton High School appearing in the Sunday Democrat-Capital.

Graduates named to the honor list compiled at least a 7.0 (S-) cumulative grade point average for their four years of academic work.

Also, the name of Lee Young was inadvertently left off the list of students named to the State Fair Community College Dean's list for the past semester. The list appeared in the Sunday Sedalia Democrat-Capital.

Persons named to the list compiled a graduate point average between 3.0 and 4.0 for the past semester.

Barbara Jean Schrader, daughter of Mrs. Geraldine Schrader, 715 West Third, earned a bachelor of arts degree from Stephens College, Columbia. She received one of 275 degrees conferred by the college during graduation ceremonies last month.

Committee approves bingo bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A bill allowing charitable organizations to conduct bingo games was given committee approval Wednesday, while a revision of the state judicial retirement system was defeated.

The Senate Municipal Corporations Committee voted 4-1 to send the "bingo bill" to the Senate floor. It provides for a statewide referendum on a constitutional amendment which would permit bingo by charitable organizations.

Six persons, representing religious groups, opposed the bill during the committee meeting.

Sam Martin of the Missouri Baptist Convention told the committee that passage of the bingo bill would "open up the doorway to something that's already been defined as a gambling game."

Sen. Don Manford, D-Kansas City, cast the lone vote against the bill.

The judges' retirement bill was defeated in the House Economics Committee, although other bills, revising the state's 140-year-old criminal code, streamlining the entire judicial system and increasing aid to junior colleges, were approved.

The retirement bill would not increase benefits, but would allow judges greater take-home pay with a circuit judge receiving $1,400 more in spendable income since the bill would have eliminated the five per cent contribution paid by judges into the retirement plan.

The bill did not get to the floor since it received only a tie vote on a motion to approve it.

The junior college aid bill, a compromise between the House and Senate versions, would cost about $3.2 million next year.

The committee also sent to the floor a Senate-approved bill making the Kansas City home of artist Thomas Hart Benton a state park.

K.C. book store employe found shot to death

KANSAS CITY (AP) — An employe of a downtown Kansas City adult book store was found shot to death in the establishment at 31st and Main Wednesday evening.

A customer reported finding the body, police said. They said they were withholding the victim's name pending notification of next of kin.

The victim, 28, had been shot in the head, and was lying face down on the floor of the small movie room at the rear of the store.

Police said robbery was the apparent motive for the slaying. An empty cash register drawer was on the counter in the store. The amount of cash taken was not determined.

New guard armories okayed by committee

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — New Army National Guard armories would be constructed in Caruthersville and Kennett under a proposed amendment approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee Wednesday night.

The amendment added a section to the capital improvements appropriations bill to include $150,000 each for the state's portion of building the armories.

The federal government would put up the remaining funds needed to complete construction.

Corrections system panel topic

"Corrections in Missouri — What Can Citizens Do?" will be the topic of a panel discussion at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the City Council Chambers in the Municipal Building.

The panel, headed by Dr. Noel Heermance, Jefferson City, corrections chairman of the Missouri Association for Social Welfare (MASW), will discuss education's role in the rehabilitation program and the citizen's role in providing that education.

Also on the panel will be a

"Our program is to help develop citizen interest and awareness of our correctional institutions, and to show how our public monies can be spent to the best advantage of all," Dr. Heermance said. The public is encouraged to attend, he noted, and open discussion is welcomed.

The program is sponsored by the Missouri State Committee for the Humanities and the Missouri Association for Social Welfare.

Empathy, love are needed by elderly

A change in what he termed "the prevalent American attitude toward the aged" was called for Wednesday by Dr. Henry Hardwick, professor of rehabilitation at the University of Missouri, Columbia, in an address at the Fairview Nursing Home, 1714 West 16th.

"The masses of American people must learn there is nothing unnatural or abhorrent about the aging process," Hardwick told about 60 local and area elderly persons, interested citizens and nursing home employes. "What we're talking about is not what older folks or nursing homes need, but, instead, on what the people as a whole need. We must be able to communicate to younger people that there is only one missing ingredient in much of the governmental assistance programs and individual help programs — love and empathy."

"One thing older persons doesn't need is pity, yet this is the very approach most often offered toward the needy and aged," he continued. "If you feel sorry for these people, you feel so superior that you can't really reach them."

Two primary needs of the aged, Hardwick stated, were friends with common interests and the attitude "that you want to fill your life with the business and joy of living."

In briefly tracing the history of specialized confinement for the infirm and aged, Hardwick connected this situation to similar circumstances in the confinement of certain physically and mentally ill persons.

"We put tuberculosis patients in small villages purposefully as far away from us as possible," he noted. "What did we do about mental illness? We hid it. Indeed, nearly anything resulting in death or permanent disability, we treated in this manner. We wanted these people treated, but always by somebody else and not us."

"All of us in America perhaps tend to think in these terms at one time or another about the aged, who are what we fear to be: who foreshadow our own future. We fail utterly when we succumb to such thoughts."

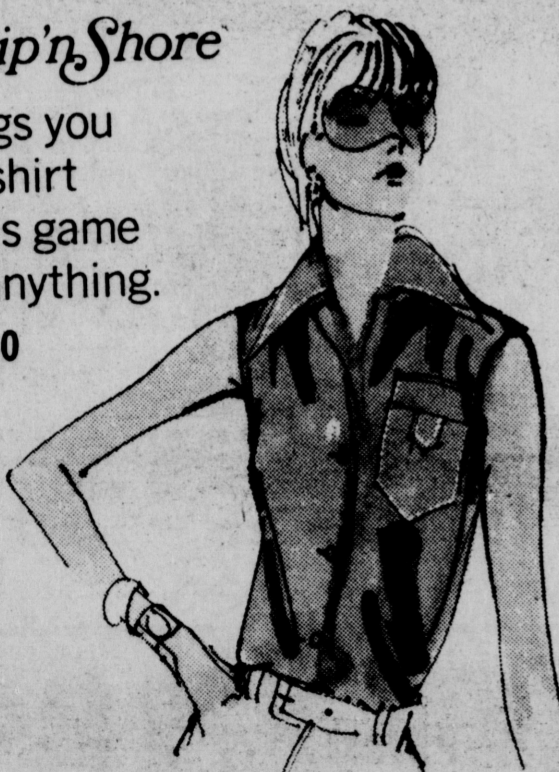

Although acknowledging the benefits of government-implemented programs to help the aged and handicapped with medical expenses, Hardwick noted what he believes to be an undesirable side-effect. "Now, too many times, people think, well, the government's taking care of them now, we won't have to do anything more," he said. "...our social consciousness must not stop at this governmental level."

Regarding medical discoveries, Hardwick said, the discovery of penicillin by Sir Alexander Fleming in the 1930's provided a new life-saving source of antibiotics, increasing life expectancy by 30 years. However, he added, "soon we discovered there were a whole array of virus infections against which penicillin was ineffective. As soon as we discover the cure for one thing, new diseases or conditions seem to come up. In short," he concluded, "we must realize that kindness and empathy added together equals love. I think it's about time the entire citizenry begin to spend a little more deliberate time with the aged; to start developing an attitude which is foreign to many of them, but which is, I believe, necessary for us all."

Quilts from the past

Mrs. Theodore Wells, Pettis County Historical Society director, holds a calico quilt in a star pattern that was made before 1850. Behind the calico quilt, a friendship quilt, dated 1895, bears the names of local residents and merchants. The quilts, along with several old newspapers and an early 1900 guestbook, are included in the current bicentennial display at the Sedalia Public Library. This display will be at the Library until June 10. The society plans to sponsor historical displays at the library through 1976. (Democrat-Capitol Photo)

Historical society to sponsor library bicentennial displays

Items of local historical interest are displayed at the Sedalia Public Library as the first in a series of displays to be sponsored by the Pettis County Historical Society.

Quilts, newspapers and a guest book are included in the current display which will be at the library until June 10. The society's displays will be interspersed with local library art through next year, Mrs. Elaine Keele, library assistant, said.

A friendship quilt, given as a wedding gift in 1895 to Cora Duncan Sullivan, bears names of past local residents and merchants. The names of W. E. Conner, presiding judge; J. C. Porter, sheriff; and family names of Blair, Danforth, Ramsey, McCurdy, Wood and Wise are written in embroidery on quilted pink and white rectangles.

The quilt and hand-made baby garments, which won ribbons as historical entries at the Missouri State Fair Centennial in 1921, are the gift of Frances and Mary Helen Meyer, Independence, formerly of Sedalia.

Woman recalls Civil War tales

LIBERTY, Mo. — Recalling childhood stories of the Civil War, Mrs. Anna E. DeHaven, formerly of Smithton, marked her 102nd birthday anniversary Monday.

Confined by a circulatory ailment to her bed at the Odd Fellows Home here, Mrs. DeHaven celebrated the occasion with greetings from visitors and a red rose corsage.

She was born in Pettis County 4 miles from Smithton in 1873.

The past nine years she has lived at the home.

"I've had a wonderful life," she said as reported in an interview with the Kansas City Star. "I liked everything. I liked to work. I loved to whistle."

Her father, Henry Wagenknecht, came to the U.S. from Berlin. As she was growing up, with the Civil War fresh in the mind of her elders, she recalls listening to many fascinating stories about "bushwhackers."

Mrs. DeHaven was married to Ira DeHaven April 19, 1900. They had one daughter, Mrs. Doyné A. Phillips, 62, Kansas City; and reared a niece, Mrs. Evelyn P. Page, Smithton. Mrs. DeHaven has two grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

If she has a formula for her longevity, "I don't know what it would be," she said. "I think the Lord helped me out. I always kept my sense of humor. I was never mad, always happy."

Faded coat requires professional dye job

By POLLY CRAMER

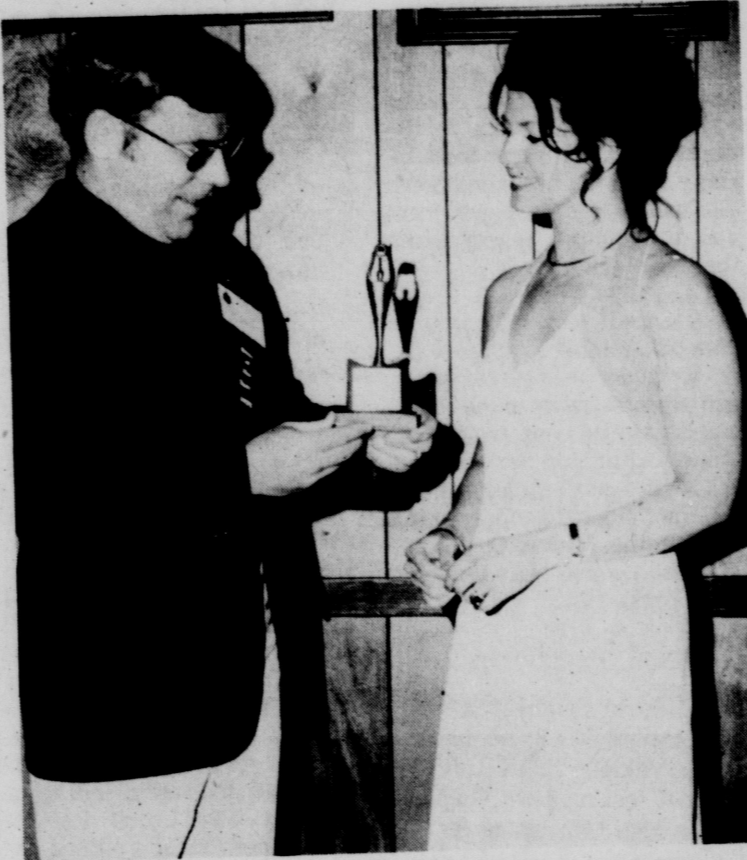

DEAR POLLY — Save the metal pull tabs from carbonated beverages and use them when making jellies and jams. Place such a ring in the liquid paraffin before it hardens. When ready to use the jam or jelly you have a handy paraffin remover. — DOROTHY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the elastic and gripper fastenings at the waist of men's pajama pants. The elastic promptly breaks and the fasteners get so loose they will not hold especially if the wearer is large around the waist. Whatever happened to those nice old-fashioned drawstrings that were so simple, inexpensive and fit all sizes? — MRS. J.A.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I bought a beautiful aqua-colored coat at a discount store but it is damaged. There is a faded line about two inches wide up one sleeve, around the collar and down the other sleeve. I thought of spraying fabric dye on it. Do you think this would work? — Senior Citizen ANN.

DEAR ANN — I really do not think anything will work on your coat except a professional dye job. I would not try the fabric spray on the faded spots. You doubtless would end up with more trouble than you now have. Sometimes garments so faded have been in store windows where the sun hit them. Often we are all so pleased with finding a great bargain that we fail to give it a thorough going over. If possible always take such garments (usually they are marked "Sale Final") to the daylight. Interior store lights do not always show up color imperfections. — POLLY. (NEA)

Cheerleader clinics planned

The Missouri State High School Activities Association (MSHSAA) will sponsor a series of six, one-day cheerleader clinics for member schools June 9 to 14.

The clinics will feature Greg and Gail Brimhall of the National Cheerleader Association (NCA) as instructors. They are both experienced instructors having taught at clinics in ten different states for the NCA over the past five years.

Greg, a former head cheerleader at Utah State University, is an outstanding gymnast. Gail is a graduate of Kansas University where she was the captain of the pom-pom squad. Both were also cheerleaders on the high school level.

Each session will include a lecture on cheerleaders' responsibilities, their role in crowd control, facets of effective cheerleading and methods of developing spectator interest and sportsmanship. New stunts and special yells and chants will also be taught.

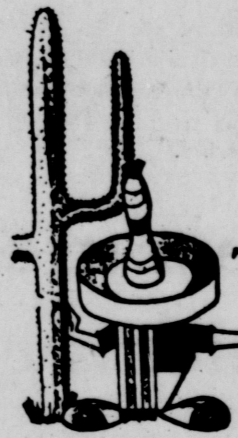

Last year, 1,600 cheerleaders from across the state attended the six clinics. This year's schedule is as follows: June 9, Truman High School, Independence; June 10, Macon High School, June 11, Rolla High School, June 12, Parkway

High School, Springfield; June 13, Jackson High School; and June 14, Horton Watkins High School, Ladue.

Ann Landers

Senator's daughter resents overtones

Dear Ann Landers: My father is the person I love most in all the world. I respect him above all other men. I know he is honest and works long hours for a very unglamorous salary. He is a state senator.

Throughout my high school education (I'm a 16-year-old girl) I have had it drummed into my head that politics is a dirty business and people in government are all corrupt and dishonest. Every time I hear one of my friends, or worse yet, a teacher make this ignorant accusation, I cringe.

Most people don't have the faintest idea of the hard work people in politics do. Just because a few dozen characters in Washington went wrong it doesn't mean politics is dirty and ALL politicians are crooks. Please tell them there are still plenty of decent, respectable men in office. Open their eyes. Ann. Sign me — Of The People

Dear Friend: I know several extremely fine people in politics in both parties — at every level — city, state and national. I, too, resent the implication that all politicians are crooks. Furthermore, I seriously doubt that there are more rotten eggs in politics than in other fields — medicine, law, business, labor unions, farming, etc. Politicians receive more publicity because what they do makes news.

We mustn't lose sight of the fact that politicians are elected by US — the people. If we put crooks and liars in high places it's our fault when things get loused up. People get the kind of government they deserve.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm sure you'll think this is silly compared with the serious letters that cross your desk every day, but I need to know if blushing is a physical problem or an emotional problem.

Can you tell me if there is anything a person can do to overcome blushing? Thanks for your help. — Little Pinky In Fort Wayne

Dear Pinky: Blushing is the physical manifestation of an emotional problem. When something occurs that causes discomfort (guilt or embarrassment — feelings of inadequacy or frustration), the blood supply mechanism goes into action and the result can be a red face.

You can do nothing about blushing because it's not in the realm of "controllable impulses."

Dear Ann Landers: Our 19-year-old daughter ran off and married a bum last year. We tried to tell her he was a rotter but she wouldn't listen. Six months ago he knocked her hat off in a public restaurant and threw a piece of chocolate pie in her face. She left the place in tears and came to our house and spent the night.

The following day when she went home she discovered her husband had left and taken most of the furniture with him. (Must have rented a van during the night.)

The girl is pregnant and due to deliver next month. Her father insists on taking her to the hospital when the time comes. She doesn't want him there. She's afraid the bum might show up and there would be a terrible fight in the hospital. Maybe you can get through to him. Ann. He thinks you are a smart woman. — Brainless Wife

Dear Wife: Your daughter's doctor should speak to your husband. If she doesn't want him in the hospital he should stay away. (Often a man thinks a woman is smart until she disagrees with him. Then all of a sudden she's just another dummy — like his wife.)

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to pay it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Saudi Arabia seeks green desert

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

HOFUF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The government of Saudi Arabia is planning to spend $12 billion of its oil wealth in an effort to turn the eastern Saudi desert green.

This ancient oasis 180 miles east of Riyadh is the center of a grandiose desert reclamation program, part of a $143.5 billion five-year development plan.

The program here is but a fraction of Saudi Arabia's agricultural plans. In all 4.18 million hectares are to be turned from sand to farmland.

"But this will require at least half a century to accomplish," said Taher Ebied, undersecretary of agriculture. "We have the money, we have water resources. What we don't have is an adequate infrastructure to carry out this ultimate objective."

At present, only 1.4 million acres of farmland are cultivated in the desert monarchy, which earns more than $25 billion in oil revenues annually.

At this oasis, the midnight horizon glows in fierce red hues at the edge of Dhahran, the world's largest oil field. As tongues of flared gas fret the skyline, camels file by the palm trees, heedless of the modernity developing around them.

The kingdom, Ebied said, envisions improving and regulating underground water resources and installing an efficient drainage network to reduce salinity in various areas.

Five research centers have been set up in Jidda, Riyadh, Hassa and Qatif, in addition to the one in Hofuf. These operate model farms and carry out experiments dealing with fishing, insecticides, fodder, seeds, fertilizers, poultry and livestock.

"We have 17 medium-size dams in the kingdom," said Ebied, "and we will increase these to 23, gradually."

Most of those dams control rain waters in the southern regions of Jaizan and Abha.

The biggest is Jaizan Dam: about 1,000 feet long and 125 feet high, with a capacity to store enough water, to irrigate about 50,000 acres. It cost $27 million.

The Hassa irrigation and drainage program cost $70 million and increased the cultivable area around Hofuf from 20,000 acres to 50,000 acres.

Hofuf was once a rest area for nomadic Bedouins. The government has earmarked $30 million for resettling those Bedouins at Hassa, Hofuf, Khobar and elsewhere. This envisions pumping water from 50 wells, and distributing it through an irrigation network covering about 10,000 acres.

The government has been giving them land water seeds and advice, said Agagui. No estimates are available on the size of the Bedouin population or the number of those settled at Hofuf.

The resettlement was started five years ago. Hofuf and nearby Hassa are the new homes for the Bedouins of eastern Saudi Arabia, where irrigation projects have consumed $6.3 million. More money is being spent on electrification, road building and education in the area.

Under the plan, $1.8 billion went to electrification projects. Desalinated water production will rise from 57 million gallons a day to 163 million. A total of 270,000 new homes, some in reclaimed areas, are to be built.

Experts are testing 250 types of wheat to cultivate 167,000 acres and raise production from 75,000 tons to 100,000 tons over four years.

To encourage private investment in agriculture, the government will distribute reclaimed areas at an average of 32 acres to 160 acres per farmer. Ownership will depend on whether the farmers are able to exploit the land satisfactorily within three years. Otherwise, the land would be given to able farmers.

The incentive program includes selling agricultural machinery to farmers at 55 per cent of regular prices. There is to be a 50 per cent price reduction on prices of imported fertilizers.

Dairy equipment is to be sold to farmers at 70 per cent of their import prices.

Farmers will get $2.50 annually for each sheep and $14 a year for every she-camel.

Agriculture officials here speak of billions of dollars and assert that the days of scratching a living from small sandy plots are over for the farmers and Bedouins of Saudi Arabia.

Vegetable production is near self-sufficiency, they say, and farmers who had deserted their salinity-stricken farms were now returning.

can he ask North to bid seven? He starts proceedings by bidding five spades. This bid says in theory, "We are one ace short for six. Bid five notrump and play it there."

North bids five notrump and now South goes to six clubs. He has delivered a second message which is, "We have enough aces for seven. Bid seven if you think your trumps are good enough."

North's trumps are good enough and he bids seven. There is a little play to the hand, but with trumps breaking 2-1 and spades 4-2 South is able to draw trumps, ruff out one spade, discard two diamonds from dummy and finally ruff his small diamond.

The grand slam force was invented by Ely Culbertson about 40 years ago. The bid, designed to find out how good partner's trumps were, was too advanced for that day. But it has been revived and put in every expert's bidding kit today.

Cards trade Brinkman, Moore for Davis

Willie Davis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "The man can play. He comes to play. He likes to play," Ted Sizemore declared.

Sizemore's reaction Wednesday night was to the St. Louis Cardinals' acquisition of controversial Willie Davis from the Texas Rangers, a move designed to bolster the National League club's outfield.

And another future teammate of Davis, long a scourge among N.L. hitters in his 15 major league seasons, echoed the sentiments of Sizemore.

"He's got three or four or five years left in him," predicted Reggie Smith, who gave his approval to the Cards' 2-for-1 deal in obtaining Davis, who is 35.

"It was a good deal, especially when we were able to get a quality backup man like him," Smith said. "He should fit in well with this type of club."

The Cards' general manager, Bing Devine, said recent injuries to Smith, who was sidelined for 17 games, and to Bake McBride, who has been out of action for more than three weeks, had a bearing on the trade.

"But mostly it was just that he was a good ball player and a good addition," Devine added. "We gave an infielder (Ed Brinkman) whom we'd admittedly had great plans for and a pitcher (Tommy Moore) who wasn't throwing much."

"We feel that Brinkman was expendable to get a ball player of Davis' talent," Devine explained.

"Willie Davis has been a good friend of mine," said an elated Sizemore, who was Davis' teammate with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1969 and '70.

"Heck, he's like Lou Brock," Sizemore maintained. "He can play until he's 40. I think it was a heck of a deal for us and a heck of a deal for Brinkman, because he'll get to play more."

The 33-year-old Brinkman had lost his starting position with the Cards after his batting average dwindled to .254 on May 4.

Afterward the Cards inserted Mike Tyson at the position for 10 games, returned the job to Brinkman over a four-game stretch and finally settled on newcomer Mario Guerrero at shortstop two weeks ago.

In other action Wednesday, St. Louis returned McBride to its active list and sent rookie first baseman Keith Hernandez to Tulsa.

FOUL!

There's no doubt in the mind of first-base umpire James McKean as he gives the foul sign to this hot grounder off the bat of Rick Manning in the first inning of Wednesday night's game in Cleveland. Kansas City Royals' first baseman John Mayberry tries to glove the ball.

Berra has three fields from which to choose

NEW YORK (AP) — If Manager Yogi Berra of the New York Mets wants to congratulate his son, Dale, on being chosen in the first round of baseball's free agent draft Wednesday, he has Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's permission — to write him a letter.

"I would emphasize that your representatives are not to discuss negotiations by a player with another club," the commissioner warned the 24 major league clubs before Wednesday's draft got started. "If you want to congratulate a player, write him a letter. Any personal contact will be viewed with suspicion."

Yogi's 18-year-old son was picked in the first round of the draft, but not by the Mets. Instead, the Montclair, N.J., high school shortstop was grabbed by the Pittsburgh Pirates after the Mets had decided instead to choose a high school catcher, Alfred Benton of Tallahassee, Fla.

So Berra is forewarned. If he wants to talk to Dale at dinner time, it had better be about the food.

Young Berra batted .520 this season with 52 hits in 100 at bats including 10 home runs. But he may not be ready to turn pro. He's had baseball scholarship offers from Arizona State, Miami and Seton Hall among others and football offers from Ohio State and Notre Dame. His older brother, Tim, was a rookie wide receiver with the National Football League Baltimore Colts last season.

Redlands closes in on 9th title

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Redlands of California moved into position to win its ninth team championship going into the fourth day of the five-day National Association of Inter-collegiate Athletics tennis tournament.

The Californians had 28 points and a chance to pick up six more today. Only Presbyterian (S.C.), with 26, had an outside chance of overtaking Redlands. Gustavus Adolphus was third with 24 and out of contention for first place.

Keeping Gustavus up there was top-seed Dave Petersen who eliminated Jim Doal of Redlands in Wednesday's quarter-finals, 6-4, 7-5.

With second-seeded John Blomberg of Claremont-Mudd (Calif.) ousted, today's scheduled semifinal matching Petersen and Craig Edwards of Redlands may produce the eventual singles champion.

Edwards reached the final four by outlasting Carlos Dario Behar of Presbyterian, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3. Blomberg was eliminated by seventh-seeded Dan Hanson of Redlands, 6-3, 6-2.

Pitchers high on Cardinals, Royals draft lists

NEW YORK (AP) — The Kansas City Royals and St. Louis Cardinals put a premium on pitchers in the professional baseball draft Wednesday, but the Royals took an outfielder first.

Kansas City selected Clinton Hurdle, a 17-year-old all around athlete from Merritt Island, Fla., who batted .567 this spring. Hurdle also was a quarterback and has been chosen to play in Florida's football and baseball all-state games.

St. Louis took David Johnson, a pitcher from Gaylord, Mich., on the first round.

In all the Royals picked six pitchers, four catchers, four outfielders and two infielders while St. Louis selected nine

Hickman wins

CMC all-sports championship

Six league championships have netted the Columbia Hickman Kewpies the Central Missouri Conference all-sports championship.

Hickman won the honor by two points over Jefferson City, 11-13. At the lower end of the scale, Sedalia Smith-Cotton nudged Hannibal, 26-27, for third place.

Hickman won CMC championships in football, basketball, track, baseball, tennis and tied Jefferson City for the wrestling crown. Jefferson City won the other two titles in golf and cross country.

Sedalia's best finishes came in cross country and golf, where the Tigers finished second.

The official announcement was made Wednesday by league secretary Fred Faurot, Columbia.

Center jumps may be out next year

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The National Basketball Association may do away with center jumps and add a third official for its games next season.

But which team, if any, will George McGinnis be playing for?

The proposed rules changes, to be tried on an experimental basis in exhibition games and perhaps adopted for the 1975-76 regular season, were the most interesting items coming out of Wednesday's NBA Board of Governors' meetings.

Outside the meeting room, the Golden State Warriors completed a trade made last week by sending guard Butch Beard to the Cleveland Cavaliers and there was continued speculation that Milwaukee would trade 7-foot-2 star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. The NBA champion Warriors earlier gave Cleveland two draft picks in exchange for veteran forward Dwight Davis.

The agenda for today's final sessions of the league meeting included the cases of McGinnis and Julius Erving, co-Most Valuable Players of the ABA this past season.

McGinnis bought his way out of his contract with the Indiana Pacers and signed last week with the NBA's New York Knicks for almost $3 million. But the Philadelphia 76ers hold NBA draft rights to the ABA scoring champion and want the signing declared illegal and void.

Erving is playing now with the ABA's New York Nets under a long-term contract, but the Atlanta Hawks signed him three years ago, a few days before the Bucks selected him in the NBA draft. The Hawks were fined for using him in two exhibition games, then sold his rights to the Nets. The Bucks have asked for compensation.

Larry O'Brien, new NBA commissioner, said he hoped decisions could be made today in both cases.

Boston Celtics President Red Auerbach and special league consultant Eddie Gottlieb announced the proposed changes involving center jumps and officiating. Both are on the league's competition committee.

Instead of having center jumps to open each period of a game, the teams will alternate taking the ball out of bounds. There still would be jump balls called during the game in tieup situations.

"There are a lot of reasons for the change," Auerbach said, including the fact that short referees have trouble throwing the ball straight up and high enough for 7-foot centers.

Muhammad Ali:
'I don't hate nobody...'

12,000 on hand to listen to Ali

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard University seniors whooped and shouted as world heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali made his debut as a Harvard lecturer Wednesday night.

More than 1,200 students jammed the Harvard Business School auditorium to hear the words of the famed boxer who admits to "barely making it out of high school with a D-minus average."

For more than an hour, Ali talked without notes to the predominantly white audience about life and love and the value of true friendship.

"I had to let you know there are more sides to Muhammad Ali than you see on television," the 33-year-old fighter told Harvard's graduating class.

"People don't pay for that," he said of his lecture and poem on friendship. "They pay for foolishness."

In a lecture interrupted by applause and several standing ovations, Ali urged the students to "remember what you are today, because when you make it, you have a tendency to forget what you were yesterday."

"I'm from Louisville, Ky., a little black boy who made $18 a week and wanted to be Golden Gloves champ," he said.

Ali estimated he would make about $2 million in his next bout with Joe Bugner of Great Britain, set for July 1 in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Noting that some of those present in the auditorium would go on to be presidents, doctors, lawyers and scientists, Ali added, "I understand to speak to you, it's got to be pretty heavy."

But it was the familiar "Ali shuffle" and the fighter's quips about an imitation of sportscaster Howard Cosell that really brought the house down.

Most of the queries tossed at Ali during the question and answer session which ended the program tended to be light, referring to his antics in and out of the ring. One of the few serious questions was about the Boston school integration situation, which was plagued by violence last fall.

"I don't know nothing about Boston," Ali said. "We love our Islamic schools. We're too proud," he said, to want to be integrated into white schools.

"I don't hate nobody," he added. "I just love my own. Why upset the whole neighborhood? Exert your energies in your own neighborhoods. The problem is not busing, the problem is not a white problem, the problem is in your mind."

No Ali appearance would be complete without poetry, and the champion had a few offerings for the students.

At his wife Melinda's request, he recited his shortest poem, "How it feels to be as great as me."

"Me, whee."

Ali told a news conference earlier in the day he expected to be in the fight business five more years, then spend another 10 years in exhibition bouts to "let them see the ex-champ in places like Libya and Malaysia."

Breaks go Cards way in 5-2 win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lou Brock maintains "things happen when you're in motion" and former teammate Ray Sadecki agrees.

But for Sadecki, an ex-St. Louis Cardinal left-hander in his pitching debut Wednesday night for the Atlanta Braves, less motion on the part of the Cards would have helped.

The 34-year-old Sadecki, traded by St. Louis last week, permitted the Cards three singles through seven innings only to be faced with a 2-2 deadlock starting the eighth.

Then, after Brock was retired on a long fly ball, three straight Sadecki pitches were converted into Cardinal hits and the Braves eventually emerged with a 5-2 loss.

"Things happened too fast," conceded Sadecki, 1-1, whose downfall began as light-hitting Ted Sizemore laid down a one-out bunt single.

"Luis Melendez hit a drive," Sadecki reflected of his next pitch, a single to left field, "but Reggie Smith's hit was just in the right spot."

"A step either way and it would've been either a foul ball or a double play," insisted Sadecki of a drive Smith smashed off the third base bag into the left field corner for a two-run triple.

Ken Reitz afterward singled home Smith to cap the winning, three-run Cards burst but no less damaging to Sadecki was a lone St. Louis hit in the third.

At that point, with Atlanta holding a 2-0 lead, the Cards began harmlessly enough as Mario Guerrero was hit by a Sadecki pitch.

Mike Tyson ran for Guerrero, took second on a wild pitch and reached third on winning pitcher John Curtis' sacrifice.

Sadecki induced Brock to bounce back to the mound, turned to keep Tyson at third and afterward lobbed an off-target throw to first for an error enabling Brock to reach base.

Sizemore next lifted a sacrifice fly to left field and, with Brock breaking for second, Melendez drove a hit through Atlanta second baseman Marty Perez' vacated position.

Center fielder Clarence Gaston went to his left to retrieve the bounding ball and the flying Brock, who never looked back, dashed all the way home from first base on the single.

"I ran through the signal," said Brock, whose sprint produced the 2-2 tie. "In fact he (third base coach Vern Benson) gave me the hold sign, but I was too far gone."

"That's AstroTurf, that's what it is," sighed the weary Sadecki in reference to the damaging blow off the artificial surface at Busch Stadium.

"Sometimes it's going to help you," Sadecki commented, "and sometimes it's going to beat you, just like it did to us tonight."

Decathlon brings 19 points to BYU

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Clarence Robinson wouldn't mind if the NCAA Track and Field Championships were turned into a series of decathlons.

The Brigham Young University head coach grinned despite cold winds late Wednesday night after four of his athletes gave the Cougars 19 points even before the single events begin in the 54th annual collegiate title meet, and the hometown favorite, Raimo Pihl, came through with a meet record and a victory.

The muscular 25-year-old Pihl scored 8,079 points — just 10 short of C.K. Yang's collegiate record — and said it was only the start of much bigger things.

"I missed the javelin badly," said Pihl. "It made me sick. I just blew it. I know I can throw much further."

Pihl has done 278-1 in the javelin and his 238-0 may have been a disappointment but still surpassed the NCAA meet mark he set two years ago when he won his first NCAA title.

"It's nice to have those 19 points on the scoreboard," said Robinson. "I only wish they had more decathlons."

"Still, it's nice to have the lead. Maybe those early points will become contagious."

He said two factors hurt

Pihl as he attempted to break the Yang mark and the Swedish national record of 8,188.

"The altitude — if he had competed at a lower altitude — he certainly would have scored better. Also, the 100 and long jump being contested in the rain on Tuesday really hurt," said the coach.

Oregon's Craig Brigham scored 7,847 for second but Chryster Lythell of BYU grabbed third, teammate Stefan von Gerich was fifth and Aaro Alaruto, sixth in the 10-8-6-4-2-1 scoring.

Today's session, with only qualifying races and field events, opens with some unusual pairings in the heats.

Master Derby draws No. 1 starting spot

NEW YORK (AP) — Foolish Pleasure, the Kentucky Derby winner, Master Derby, winner of the Preakness, and seven other 3-year-olds were entered today for the 107th running of the $125,000-added Belmont Stakes.

John Greer's Foolish Pleasure, who was the runner-up in the Preakness, drew the No. 2 post for the 1 1/2-mile Belmont on Saturday. Mrs. Robert Lehmann's Master Derby, whose Preakness triumph followed a fourth in the Derby, will start from the rail.

Others entered in order of their post position are John Galbreath's Prince Thou Art; Frank McMahon's Diabolo; Arthur A. Seeligson Jr.'s Avatar; Cynthia Phipps and Hal Price Headley Jr.'s Singh; Thomas Mellon Evans' Just The Time; Max Gluck's Syllabus and Mrs. George Humphrey's Nalees Rialto. Just The Time and Syllabus are a Johnny Campo-trained entry.

Master Derby required a supplementary fee of $2,500 to enter and $10,000 to start since he was not nominated for the Belmont. He also had to be supplemented for the Preakness and the $10,000 fee turned out to be well worthwhile for owner Mrs. Robert Lehmann. The Preakness winner's share was $158,100.

If nine go to the post, each under 126 pounds, at about 5:35 p.m., EDT, Saturday, the race will be worth $168,859, with $101,910 to the winner.

CBS will televise the event from 5 p.m.-6 p.m., EDT. A victory by Foolish Pleasure, owned by John L. Greer, or Master Derby would make either the leader of the 3-year-old males. Unbeaten Ruffian is the No. 1 3-year-old filly, and some horsemen feel she is the best 3-year-old, Period.

Foolish Pleasure's runner-up finish in the 13 1/2 mile Preakness was only his second loss in 13 career starts.

Detroit works its magic wands on American buyers

By OWEN ULLMAN
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — They had been meeting for six months, off and on, beginning in January 1971. Product boss Gerry Meyers ordered his stylists to come up with something "entirely different."

Something, he said, that would carry American Motors into the 1980s.

Time after time he rejected their ideas. "Too much of a 'Me Too' attitude," he said. Now it was June and he had set a deadline.

Dick Teague, a 52-year-old vice president for styling picked up a scratch pad and sketched in quick short strokes.

"I think it could look like this," he said tentatively. It looked like a bathtub upside down and fixed to a set of wheels.

"You're absolutely right," said Meyers. "That's it. That's what we want."

And American Motors Corp. set about designing and building a car from the outside in.

Almost four years later a gas station attendant looked quizzically as a car resembling Dick Teague's doodle pulled up to the pump. He flipped up the hood, searched for the oil dip stick and shook his head. "It's strange, man."

Never seen an American car like it.

Pacer has been called the ugliest car ever built and it's been called a daring first attempt to marry the big roomy car and the need for a small fuel-frugal urban vehicle. Some say it's the first radical design change since Ford's 1964 Mustang, and some say it will never force a change in Big Three car lines. Time will tell.

"This is history," says Arvid Jouppe, a Detroit Financial analyst. "More than any other car in this year of small car mania, the Pacer will establish a size trend."

The Pacer's statistics make it difficult to compare. It's small, wide, wallowing in glass. It's shorter than a Vega, but in width, height and interior space, it has the dimensions of an intermediate Chevelle.

The Pacer's fuel economy — 18 mpg in the city and 24 mpg on the highway, according to the government — is in the compact range. Its $3,300 base price is competitive with compacts. But with options, the average price runs to about $4,550.

Styling is what makes it seem so different. Its curved shape begins at the lower body and flows up to the roof. The hood and rear slope down sharply, like a VW Beetle.

Most important for the men who met that day in 1971, the Pacer is a hit in the market place. Sales in March and April were 22,300, about 40 per cent of AMC's total deliveries in the two months.

That kind of volume isn't too impressive for giants like General Motors and Ford, which through massive dealer organizations sold 40,400 Novas and 36,000 Pintos, respectively, in March and April.

But for AMC, which fights each year to retain its 4 to 5 per cent share of the domestic market, the early Pacer sales are impressive.

AMC's market share this March and April was 5.4 per cent, compared with 5.1 per cent in the same two months last year.

Officials at General Motors and Ford concede in interviews that the Pacer is a winner, but not necessarily a trend setter. "It's fine for AMC," says an old hand at Ford. "They need a different car to be noticed. But it's too big a risk for a company like Ford."

For AMC, the Pacer is a carefully calculated strategy of survival for a company that lost a record $47.8 million in the first quarter of 1975 and $60 million from July through March.

At $60 million in development costs, the Pacer was a major gamble. It was conceived after AMC's top planners decided to phase out big cars because the company could not compete with GM in that field.

The situation was much like the mid-1950s, when AMC was foundering. Its main products were the big Nash and Hudson. Neither was selling.

In 1958, under George Romney, the firm began to zero in on the small car market, debuting the Rambler and the little Rambler American. Sales hit record levels through the early 1960s.

But with Romney gone in 1962, AMC turned away from small cars and concentrated on improving big-car performance. Sales plummeted and dragged for the rest of the decade.

Chairman Roy Chapin and President William Luneburg arrived in 1968, and AMC returned to the small car market. The Gremlin and the Hornet are the principal entries in this field.

The decision to return to small cars pulled AMC out of deep financial trouble, and the Pacer might preserve its health. AMC has made money since 1971. Earnings were

Winningly different

Small, wide, wallowing in glass and curves: the startlingly different looks of American Motors' Pacer are evident in this model on display in New York. The car was designed and built from the outside in — with the big on the inside. An attempt to marry the big, roomy car with the need for a small, frugal vehicle, the Pacer was a substantial gamble for AMC. But it's had a resoundingly successful reception and most industry observers agree the gamble has paid off. (AP) $44.5 million in 1973 and $27.5 million last year, despite losses that began in the third quarter.

Most companies begin work on a new car with a notion of the market for which it will be tailored. AMC, which only knew it wanted something different, began with far-flung ideas.

"First there was the luxury car. We would build the classic luxury car," said Meyers, a tall, reflective 47-year-old.

"Then there was the safety car, absolutely safe at any speed..."

"The most far out idea was the modular car. We'd sell a basic vehicle with add-ons for wagons, trucks, recreational vehicles. Sort of a do-it-yourself car."

The final concept was the urban car.

"We wanted something durable, lasting, that fits the social scene for the next 10 years," Meyers added. "To cope with urban corridors, with pollution, dirt, noise and discomfort."

"But we also wanted a lot of room on the inside."

Under Teague's guidance, AMC used a highly unorthodox approach in designing the car, beginning with the shape and trying to figure out how to package the components inside.

By October 1971, the first clay model, code-named Amigo, was built. In 1972, a fiberglass model was built for a consumer clinic in Atlanta. The lines were smoothed considerably in 1973 for a second fiberglass model shown in Dallas.

"I'd say 95 per cent of it was there at Dallas," Teague said.

The Pacer is Teague's personal trademark:

"I'm a practical sort. When I'm working I have in mind a car that I want to drive," he said. "I've always like a lot of glass, and any design subject will live longer with flowing lines than with a boxy, cubistic shape."

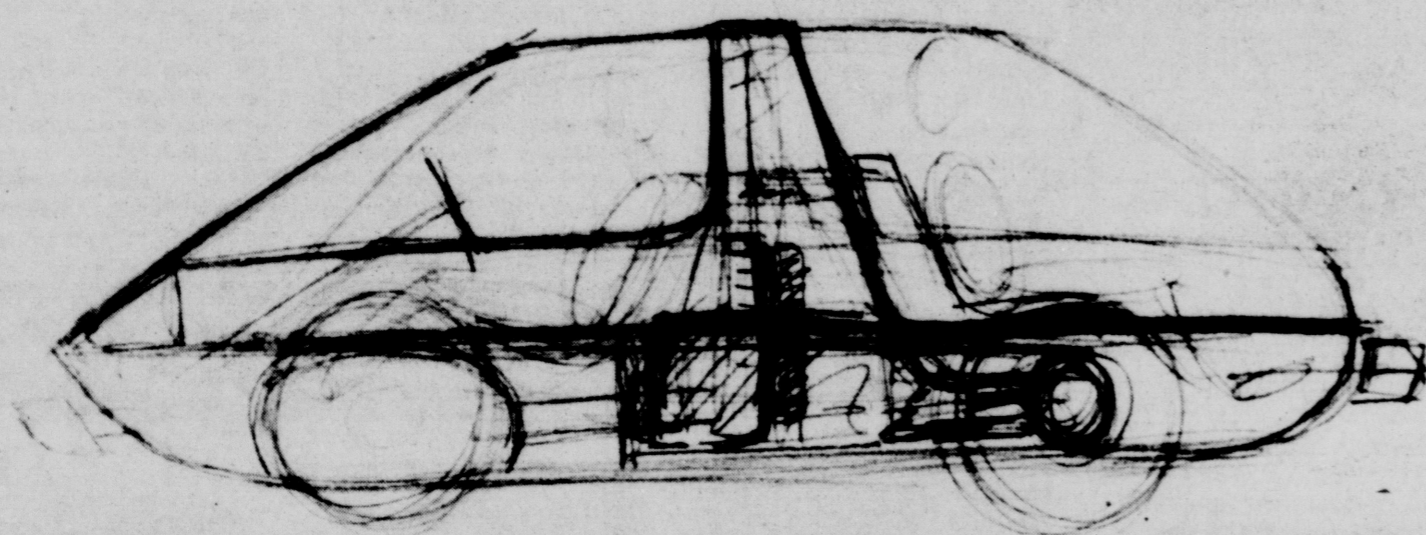

AMC wanted to sell between 100,000 and 250,000 Pacers a year-large volume for AMC

"So we looked at people the way they see themselves, not the way business looks at them," explained Meyers.

"Young people always have different sets of values, but this time dramatically. If the 1960s taught us anything, we knew things were different. We had just been through something of a minor revolution — the riots, the war, the killing..."

"Nothing was the same anymore — religion, morals, sex, politics. It was all different. People no longer measure status by the size of your car's wheelbase."

"In the final analysis looks are terribly important. But not the look of affluence, the look of taste."

Master plan

This is the first quick sketch from which the Pacer developed — made by Dick Teague, American Motors' vice president for styling, at a meeting at the company's headquarters in Detroit in 1971. The concept they were searching for was something "entirely different." And this proved to be the master plan that has made the Pacer a great talking point among manufacturers — and a great hit in the marketplace. (AP)

Paid vacations stretching

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Paid vacations are getting longer.

This might seem to be a distorted reflection of the present economic scene, with millions looking for work and not finding it and others unable to afford a vacation even if paid. But it is indisputable fact.

A survey of corporation vacation practices in 1964 showed only 2 per cent permitted paid vacations of up to five weeks. A similar survey about a decade later showed the percentage at 28. And the six-week vacation had arrived.

The Conference Board, which conducted both surveys of about 1,800 concerns, found that paid time off costs companies the equivalent of an average 8.2 per cent of payroll in 1973, up more than one per cent in six years.

Vacations and days off for personal affairs also may be getting more frequent. Time off for birthdays, and floating holidays, to be used when and as desired, are among the innovations.

The notion of paid time off has come a long way from the early days of the Industrial Revolution, which was supposed to have put machinery to work in behalf of mankind but which may have affected just the opposite.

Time off with pay apparently now is becoming one of those inalienable worker rights.

One of the biggest changes found by the board, which describes itself as a private, non-profit educational and research organization, was the addition of two paid holidays in the past decade.

Most companies now recognize six standard holidays and three more that vary with the employer. New Year's Day, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas are standard almost everywhere.

No other single day was specified by a majority in the study, but the most commonly named were: Thanksgiving Friday, Good Friday, Washington's Birthday, Veterans Day, Columbus Day and a day before or after Christmas.

While it is true that a growing number of companies now grant five- and six-week annual vacations with pay, the average company's maximum still remains close to four weeks.

In most companies, the board found, that is the reward for a minimum of 20 years of service. Typically, 10 years of service usually earns a worker three weeks of paid vacation time.

Nonoffice workers are treated less generously than office workers in the category of non-leisure paid time. Coverage of jury service and bereavement leave is almost universal for both categories is widespread, but then the differences appear.

Office workers generally are paid during time off because of trial witness service, military duty for summer encampments and civil emergencies, voting, and for medical and dental appointments.

About half the companies paid nonoffice workers for brief, temporary military duty, but almost any other remaining time is at their own expense.

Government tax junk a good buy

AZLE, Tex. (AP) — Melton Dimock surveyed the sophisticated components of the superexpensive F11 aircraft, industrial jewels, office machines, furniture and late model cars that all once belonged to the U.S. government.

They are junk now. "I'm sure we've got well over $1 million worth of government equipment," Dimock said as he studied the castoffs originally paid for with U.S. tax dollars.

"Altogether we probably paid $500 or $600 for it," said Dimock, a partner in a big salvage firm here whose "holdings" are spread over several acres of once-prime pastureland northwest of Fort Worth. Dimock said his firm gets "three or four sheets a month" from the General Services Administration (GSA), the federal agency charged with disposing of unwanted materials.

"They don't care what they get for the stuff they have for sale. They're not in the moneymaking business; they're in the getting-rid-of business."

In recent weeks, Dimock and his partner, Louis Freeman, have consummated the following transactions with the U.S. government.

—Entered a successful bid of $37 each for three Litton bombsights off the F111, which originally cost Uncle Sam $66,000 apiece.

—Bought $26,000 of tiny rubies and sapphires, used as jewel bearings in precision equipment, for $66.

—Purchased "about an acre and a half" of miscellaneous surplus items, including desks, appliances and other furniture for a total investment of $118.

Some months ago, the partners paid $35 for a radar "terrain finder" that had cost $185,000 in federal funds. They later resold the equipment for $15,000.

"Sometimes we're the only bidder," Dimock said. "When that happens, we can bid as little as $10 and get the stuff."

Used cars are put up for bid by the GSA every few weeks, he said.

"We just bought a 1971 Plymouth Fury with air and power for $161 and a 1972 Ambassador, similarly equipped, for $377," Dimock said.

Used cars have an obvious retail value, but some other items that cost American taxpayers tens of thousands of dollars only a few months ago may not move as quickly.

Who will buy, for instance, the F111 bombsights?

Freeman and Dimock shrug their shoulders.

"I don't have any idea what we'll do with them," said Freeman. "But at the price we paid, who cares?"

Tickets used in Vienna's parking plan

VIENNA (AP) — The City Fathers here have found a cheap way — for them — to charge parking fees in downtown Vienna.

Foreign motorists, used to feeding dimes — or an equivalent — into parking meters, will look in vain for them.

The city administration asserted that parking meters were disgracing streets and instead they introduced tickets which the motorists have to buy beforehand and put on their windshields.

The measure marked the first time that Viennese motorists had had to pay for parking. The City Fathers intended to introduce the fees some time ago, but then shelved the idea when elections were scheduled and when the Automobile Association announced it would go to court against the fees.

The Association lost the case but promised to continue the fight on another level.

Since April 15, parking fees of two Schillings (about 11 U.S. cents) must be paid for each half hour parking time.

The maximum parking time is 1½ hours.

The parking tickets, which have to be marked with the day, month, and arrival time, must be displayed in a way that police checking them have no trouble seeing them.

The tickets come in three denominations, for 30 minutes, one hour, and 1½ hours.

A motorist without any parking ticket at all in an area — mostly in downtown Vienna — where parking fees must be paid, is fined a minimum of 50 Schillings ($2.80).

Ford job bill to be introduced

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The House's failure to override President Ford's veto of an emergency jobs bill means a less costly Ford-supported measure will now be introduced in Congress.

The House vote Wednesday was five votes short of the two-thirds needed to override the veto of the $5.3 billion measure. Ford's program for emergency unemployment and summer jobs for youth total $2 billion.

Meanwhile, U.S. car sales were reported sharply up in May though still behind last year's levels. And there were these other economic developments:

—A new government report said that middlemen were not the villains behind the rise in food prices and that, in fact, there seem to be no villains to blame specifically for food cost increases.

—The price of raw sugar was reported down enough that growers were talking about asking for government subsidies, but Agriculture Department officials said price supports were not being considered.

—The stock market was indecisive, with the Dow Jones industrial average off 6.8 at 839.96 but gainers outpacing losers 782 to 666 among 1,838 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange. Analysts said uncertainty over the potential size and strength of the economic recovery was one factor in the market's performance.

The vote on Ford's veto, 277 to 145, was seen as a blow to the majority Democratic leadership that pushed the measure as a means of creating more than 500,000 jobs.

Ford had argued the bill's job stimulus would come when the economy was already headed toward recovery. He said the bill was inflationary, and Labor Secretary John T. Dunlop said the Ford bill to be introduced would provide $1.6 billion for 300,000 public service jobs through July 1976 and $412 million for 760,000 summer youth jobs.

In the auto industry, where 163,291 of 712,000 hourly workers are still laid off amid the sales decline, sales in May provided analysts with some hope of improvement in the troubled industry.

U.S. auto firms said car sales rose a strong 16 per cent over April, compared to a normal increase of about 8 per cent in May of past years.

Volume of sales was still the lowest for May in 14 years, however, and the month's sales remained 21 per cent below a year ago.

Import sales were up 19 per cent over a year ago but 3 per cent below the previous month. Foreign cars had an 18.5 per cent share of the U.S. market, a record for May but below their 21 per cent share in the first three months of 1975.

Chrysler Corp. had the largest decline from May 1974 with sales off 31 per cent. Sales were down 19 per cent at General Motors Corp., 22 per cent at Ford Motor Co. and 9 per cent at American Motors Corp.

But compared with April, Chrysler — with its revived rebate plan — showed sales up 41 per cent. GM sales were up 16 per cent, Ford up 9 per cent and AMC up 2 per cent.

For the first five months of the year, domestic car sales were 2,642,215, off 18.5 per cent from last year's weak levels.

Suez Canal opened after years of war

ABOARD AL HORIYA. Suez Canal (AP) — Leading a convoy of Egyptian ships dwarfed by a big American cruiser, President Anwar Sadat reopened the Suez Canal Thursday after eight years of war and uneasy peace.

Dressed in the white uniform of an admiral, Sadat led the ceremonial convoy on the bridge of the Egyptian destroyer October 6, named for the date on which Egyptian troops stormed across the Suez Canal in 193 to recapture part of the east bank.

Sailors, teen-agers and aging boatmen in white turbans jammed small boats to follow the convoy. Many hung from the rigging or perched on top of masts chanting "Sadat! Sadat!" Crowds lining the canal banks clapped and danced to the rhythm of reed flutes and leather drums.

"I have been feeling very happy since the moment I arrived in Port Said."

Sadat told a reporter aboard his destroyer. "It has been one of the happiest moments of my life when we started transiting the canal again after eight years."

The 18,500-ton guided-missile cruiser Little Rock, a flagship of the U.S. 6th Fleet, became the first foreign warship to sail the strategic waterway since it was closed by Arab-Israeli hostilities in 1967.

The reopening was timed to coincide with the anniversary of the June 1967 six-day war, which brought Israeli troops to the east bank of Suez Canal and forced Egypt to close it.

Asked whether nonstrategic cargoes bound for Israel would be permitted to pass the canal, Sadat said: "This question of cargoes is not a problem. The real question is, are we going to continue the peace process or not?"

In Tel Aviv, however, Transport Minister Gad Yaacobi said Egypt had made a written pledge to the United States as part of the 1974 Israeli-Egyptian disengagement agreement to permit Israeli-bound cargoes through.

In another development, Arab terrorist rockets hit an empty Israeli kindergarten in the Qiryat Shmonah settlement near the Lebanese border, setting off a few fires and wounding a civilian, the Israeli command reported.

Steaming down the Suez, the USS Little Rock towered over the two lead destroyers, both Soviet-built.

"The sight of the Little Rock in canal waters will make insurance carriers very happy," said one American admiral looking on.

"But it's not making those guys very happy," he pointed to two gloomy Soviet admirals, silently witnessing yet another symbol of the Egyptian-American friendship that has undercut Russian influence in this part of the volatile Middle East.

Sadat opened the canal at Port Said, its Mediterranean gateway, before boarding the October 6 for the 45-mile cruise to Ismailia, the halfway point. A simple 10-minute ceremony underlined economic austerity in a postwar Egypt plagued by lack of a permanent Arab-Israeli peace.

Speaking briefly, Sadat said: "We are reopening the canal to friendly nations and peaceful people. This rich Egyptian soil is still under occupation and people are still suffering."

Tornado rips Poplar Bluff; injuries light

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — A tornado spawned by a line of thunderstorms moving through south-central Missouri early Thursday caused an estimated $2 million in damage when it touched down in the heart of Poplar Bluff.

Civil Defense officials said the twister carved a horseshoeshaped path through the downtown area, lifting roofs off a bus terminal and a store, skipping a Catholic church and touching down again to do extensive damage to a medical center.

In spite of the heavy property damage, officials said the storm appeared to have caused only minor injuries, most of them inflicted by flying glass when windows and a large skylight were blown out of the Kneibert Clinic.

Officials said many parts of the town were without power for varying periods of time and that some lines had not been repaired by Thursday evening.

Other damage reported to police was to two drycleaners, a trailer park, a medical supply store and the Arundale Plastics Co. plant, which suffered extensive damage.

Many roads and streets were reported blocked by live power lines and fallen trees.

Britain to remain in 'Market'

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Voting in Britain's historic referendum on whether to stay in the European Common market ended Thursday night and a poll of voters emerging from the booths indicated a hefty 2-1 preference for remaining part of the nine-nation bloc.

The sampling, taken by the Independent Television News network (ITN), was in line with every major opinion poll taken before the vote.

Reports from the 68 electoral regions into which Britain's 40.6 million eligible voters are divided indicated big turnouts ranging up to 75 per cent.

The result of the referendum, first in Britain's history, will not be known until Friday afternoon at the earliest. A margin of under 150,000 vote will mandate a recount.

The day of decision for this economically stricken nation had been portrayed by promarketers and antimarketers alike as one of the most important in Britain's modern history.

Yet there was no doomsday look about Londoners as they went about their business in the streets of the city. No sense of history in the faces of farmers trudging through their soggy fields.

Air Force transfer

Federal judge stops Richards-Gebaur move

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A federal judge, in a ruling described as unprecedented, Wednesday stopped the government from moving four Air Force units to Scott Air Force Base in Illinois at least until it weighs and justifies the environmental impact.

Judge Elmo B. Hunter issued his injunction at the request of a former Air Force colonel and his wife who are civilian employees of the Air Force Communications Service at Richards-Gebaur Air Force base on the south edge of Kansas City.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. McDowell contended the Air Force violated the National Environmental Policy Act when it failed to assess and file a formal statement of the environmental impact of the transfers, particularly the social and economic effects on the people involved.

They also argued that not enough suitable housing was available at and around Scott Air Force Base, on the east fringe of the St. Louis metropolitan area. They said it offered poorer schools, transportation and shopping and recreational facilities.

The headquarters of the Air Force Communications Service, with 1,049 military people and 753 civilian jobs, is the largest of four units.

In a realignment of commands announced by the Air Force last Nov. 22, it said 600 members of an C130 tactical air lift squadron at Langley Air Force Base, Virginia, 160 members of the Tactical Airlift Command from bases around the world and 120 military and civilian employees of a special weather studies group located in Washington would be moved to Scott.

Judge Hunter's injunction also applies to the other moves.

The U.S. district attorney's office in Kansas City said the decision on the government's response will be made in Washington and it is not yet prepared to make a recommendation. The ruling could be taken to the Eighth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis, the Air Force could prepare and attempt to justify an environmental impact statement or it could do both.

Judge Hunter said he would file a written opinion in one week.

His courtroom was packed to overflowing with civilian employees and dependents of military personnel at Richards-Gebaur, as it has been since the injunction hearing began May 22.

They interrupted with lusty applause when he said his ruling would be for the plaintiffs, and he did not admonish them.

"I think it was great," McDowell said.

"I am sure 95 per cent of the people at

Meaty prize to Fathers Day baby

A bundle of beef will go along with a bundle of joy at Bothwell Hospital on Father's Day.

The first baby born at the hospital that day will win a roast beef, matching the baby's weight ounce for ounce, for his or her parents.

The West Central CowBelles, Ionia, an auxiliary of the Missouri Cattlemen's Association, will present the roast to promote beef use on Father's Day, according to Mrs. Waldo Wheeler, Windsor, who is in charge of the presentation.

The CowBelles will supply the roast.

she said, as the group has done at other area hospitals in previous years.

The hospital will notify Mrs. James Labahn, Route 4, Sedalia, a member of the auxiliary, of the winner, Mrs. Wheeler said.

The presentation is not limited to Pettis County residents, she said, adding that if no babies are born at Bothwell on Father's Day, the roast will go to the parents of the first baby born there after that day.

Mrs. Wheeler's husband is president of the Missouri Cattlemen's Association.

County teachers seek unemployment funds

Since the end of school, the state unemployment office here has handled an estimated 350 claims from Pettis County teachers and other school employees seeking jobless benefits.

Bill Giles, manager of the Missouri Division of Employment Security office, said Wednesday an estimated 160 of those are from the Sedalia school system.

The program is part of the federal Supplemental Unemployment Assistance Act, which Congress passed to help combat the recession. It includes teachers on normal summer vacation among those eligible for unemployment compensation.

Some officials say the provision is a "loophole" that was left open by mistake and will soon be closed. The Missouri General Assembly declined Tuesday to do so itself, saying it was up to Congress.

Giles said an estimated 600 teachers and school employees have applied for benefits in the three-county area covered by his office. Besides Pettis, this includes Johnson and Morgan Counties. He said about 10 teachers were in his conference room Wednesday afternoon applying for the benefits.

Maximum payment under the program is $85 a week, Giles said. He added that teachers and other school employees, even though they have contracts for the fall, would qualify. The only exception would be those on vacation or in summer school who would not be available to take jobs, he added.

Dr. Allan Henningsen, superintendent of schools, said administrators "have stayed out of this completely," except to provide space for teachers to meet with state unemployment officials.

Henningsen added that he was "philosophically opposed" to paying jobless benefits to teachers and other employees who are out on normal summer breaks.

"There just is very little legitimacy to it as far as I am concerned," the superintendent added. However, he said he could understand how some teachers on the low end of the pay scale would rush to take advantage of the federal program as long as its available.

Henningsen said about 270 teachers and between 100 and 150 other employees of the school district would be eligible for the payments.

Rock bill clears Missouri House

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A greatly revised Senate measure aimed at regulating rock festivals cleared the Missouri House Thursday and was returned to the upper chamber for reconsideration.

The House also approved and returned to the Senate a bill setting up a state registry of all administrative rules and regulations of state agencies, but included in it a provision for legislative review and possible rescission of any administrative rules.

Requirements that initiative and referendum proposals carry statements of the cost of putting their legislative or constitutional changes into effect was defeated.

The House turned that measure back on a 66-83 vote after only minutes earlier rejecting an attempt that would have killed the bill through a parliamentary maneuver.

The House version of the rock festival bill eliminates numerous detailed requirements contained in the Senate version that would have to be met by persons seeking to stage music festivals that will attract more than 5,000 persons and last longer than 12 hours.

"This goes to the body of the bill and lets the county governing body determine whether they want to have a rock festival," said Rep. Al Mueller, D-St. Louis, who sponsored the modified version.

Consideration of the bill, which will probably be put in final form by a joint compromise committee, was prompted by last summer's Ozark Music Festival at the state fairgrounds in Sedalia.

Hearings into that three-day event, which attracted an estimated 160,000 persons, showed there was a major drug problem during it.

The detailed requirements eliminated in the House measure would have required promoters of the Ozark Music Festival to provide 6,400 garbage cans, 4,000 flush toilets and 7.2 million gallons of water among other things.

The bill, however, does exempt St. Louis and St. Louis County and Jackson County from its provisions, with representatives from those areas claiming local ordinances could take care of any festivals.

The Senate version had also contained a provision that would have put the law into effect immediately after Gov. Christopher S. Bond signed it. The emergency clause was needed, supporters said, to halt rock festivals being planned for this summer.

The House, however, fell three votes short of adopting that provision. Without it, the bill would go into effect Sept. 28.

Bond should sign death penalty bill

The Missouri General Assembly has passed a death penalty bill, overcoming a deadlock that has kept such a measure from enactment for the last three years.

On Tuesday the House sent the measure to Gov. Christopher Bond on a lopsided 122-32 vote. The Senate had passed the bill earlier.

The measure provides for the death penalty in all cases of premeditated murder. Earlier versions of the bill specified several categories of crimes that would justify capital punishment, but the Senate finally settled on the broad language. The measure was sponsored by Sen. Ike Skelton of this area.

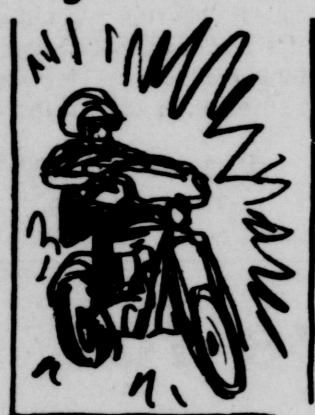

Other killings, such as those committed in the course of a robbery, burglary, rape, arson or kidnapping, are termed first degree murders and would require life sentences. (The term is misleading, however, since a life-terminer can be eligible for parole after only 15 years.)

This provision sets up a distinction that does not stand up under scrutiny. Why should a robber who kills in the course of a crime be treated any differently than he who kills in a premeditated manner? In effect his crime IS premeditated once he arms himself. The same argument holds for the other first-degree murder categories, it seems to us.

Be that as it may, the bill deserves to become law, since it is a vast improvement over things as they stand now, where criminals are assured that even the most dastardly act will often result in only minimal incarceration. The death penalty bill will give back to society the tools it needs to insure that capital crimes are met with commensurate punishment.

Governor Bond will no doubt be under severe pressure to veto the bill from those who uphold the rights of the criminal over those of law-abiding citizens. He should resist such advice.

"Who'd have thought, ten years ago, we'd be sitting here today griping about the breakdown of services!"

A conservative view

Time is not ripe for a new political party

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The most important political book of the spring will be published next week: William A. Rusher's "The Making of the New Majority Party."

Reluctantly, and with a keen awareness of my own fallibility, I have to disagree with its major thesis.

Rusher is publisher of National Review magazine. He is also a lawyer, writer, debater, columnist, and a serious student of American political history. His conservative credentials are impeccable.

In Rusher's view, the hour has come for the formation of a new major party that will unite economic conservatives and social conservatives in a coalition strong enough to compete on even terms with the Democratic Party. He is not thinking of a "third party." A lifelong Republican, he is fed up with the GOP. He finds it "essentially meaningless." Rusher's idea is to displace the Republican party altogether, and to replace it with a new party that he provisionally dubs the Independence party.

He would do to the Republicans in 1976 what the Republicans did to the Whigs in 1852: Knock them out of existence.

Rusher draws on the Whig experience to suggest certain conditions necessary to the replacement of an old party and the formation of a successful new party. Somewhat over-simplified, these conditions demand a basic issue, a fresh impulse regarding that issue, and "a strikingly weak leadership and organizational structure in the party to be replaced." The political picture today, as he sees it, exhibits each of those requirements.

Today's basic issue has to do with the role of government in the social and economic life of our country. Conservatives tend to oppose an ever-expanding federal involvement in welfare, health, education, consumer affairs, and business regulation. Liberals, by contrast, tend to support such extensions of federal power. The conflict, in Rusher's analysis, pits "producers" against "non-producers." He is convinced that a fresh conservative impulse, bluntly opposed to the liberal view, "has been struggling for effective political expression in America for nearly 20 years. GOP leadership and organization are today at an all-time low."

Rusher's premises are sound enough. It is his conclusion that I question. The Republican party (and to a lesser extent, the Democratic party also) is indeed divided on the basic issue. The Democrats, for their part, stand for something; their liberal image is clear, consistent, and politically appealing. The Republicans, by contrast, stand for nothing. If the public opinion polls are correct, a large body of putatively "conservative" opinion is waiting to be served. The GOP manifestly is not serving it.

The Whig analogy is persuasive, but not convincing. The basic issue in 1850 was the extension of slavery; it was a much sharper, more explosive issue than the basic issue Rusher postulates today. The Whigs were themselves a young party, not long established; today's Republican party, feeble as it is, has been around a long time. In 1850, the country consisted of 31 states and 23 million people; fewer than three million votes were cast in the Pierce-Scott election of '52. Today's political structure is massive.

The weakness in Rusher's argument, or so it seems to me, is that a new major party, if it would succeed, demands more than ideas, issues and fortuitous circumstances. It demands human leadership. Rusher's Independence party has no such leadership. He mentions Ronald Reagan, but Reagan modestly declines the honor. He also mentions George Wallace, but Wallace is no conservative. Wallace is a political Bobby Riggs, a hustler, a showman, a master of the trick shot. Without aggressive, respected, commanding leadership, an Independence party would go nowhere.

Other objections come to mind. Our national parties are structurally the sum of 50 state parties; it would take some ingenious political engineering to build a new structure from the top down. A new Independence party would start broke; a respectable national campaign would require funds not easily obtained under new limitations on political contributions. As Rusher himself repeatedly warns, a new major party would have to resist the zealotry of right-wing extremists — the party would have to compromise, and to many of Rusher's friends, "compromise" is a dirty word.

I may be quite wrong, but secession now strikes me as untimely and unwise. If today's conservatives had a Robert E. Lee, it might be a different matter.

A new wave of refugees

WASHINGTON — Waldo Nostrum, who works on refugee problems, was very upset when I saw him in the steam room the other day.

"You don't know what I've been going through," he said.

Buchwald

"You mean with the South Vietnamese refugees?" I asked him.

"No, I'm not working on that problem. I'm dealing with another refugee situation. I'm working on contingency plans in case New York City goes broke. I'm trying to figure out what to do with 7 million refugees who will have to be taken care of when the banks foreclose on Mayor Beame."

I whistled. "Seven million refugees? Do you think they'll all leave the city?"

"What choice do they have?" he said. "They're going to be locked out, and they're going to have to go somewhere. The main problem is that no one in the United States wants them."

"I don't see why. New Yorkers make fine citizens, and they could contribute to any community. I once had a New Yorker for a maid, and she was a wonderful person. She was almost a member of the family."

"They do make good servants," Nostrum agreed. "But not all of them are trained to do housework. Some of them are salesmen, brokers, manufacturers and lawyers. No one wants people like that."

"I see what you mean."

"And there's the language problem," Nostrum told me. "How do you teach 7 million New Yorkers to speak English?"

"Maybe they could go to night school," I suggested.

"We've thought of that. But we also have to take into consideration the culture shock. New Yorkers have their own customs which might seem strange to the rest of the country."

"Such as?"

"Well, they pick up their garbage at 5 o'clock in the morning, and while this may not seem weird to them it could cause problems in places like Peoria and Texarkana. And then New Yorkers talk to themselves all the time. Other people think they're crazy, but actually it's their way of coping with life. One of their traditional customs is to dig up their roads. They reverse holes in their streets and never try to fill them in. If they start digging holes in another city, they're going to cause a lot of ill will."

"New Yorkers will just have to be told they can't dig holes if they're accepted in a new community," I said.

"But that's just it," Nostrum said. "No community wants them. Every governor and every mayor we've talked to has said he won't take any. They all say they have no room for them and no funds to care for them until they get assimilated into the American way of life. I honestly believe the real reason, though, is that many of them are prejudiced against New Yorkers."

"Why?" I asked.

"Because most of the governors and mayors have been to New York."

"But you can't be prejudiced against an entire people just because of a few bad apples."

"Which brings me to my next problem. Before we can resettle New Yorkers, we're going to have to give each one of them a security check."

"That's going to take time."

"Don't I know it! But we can't ask the rest of the United States to take these people unless we weed out the people of low moral character. Many New York men were profiteers, and some of the women worked in massage parlors. Also some are known pinkos. These security risks have to be separated from the rest of the population."

"What are you going to do with New York City after the banks foreclose on it?" I asked Nostrum.

"The federal government will probably lease it from them."

"What for?"

"To make it into a large refugee camp."

Bind man over for circuit court trial

Daniel James Forbes, 20, Havana, Ill., formerly of LaMonte, was bound over to the September term of Pettis County Circuit Court for trial Thursday morning on charges of selling a controlled substance, LSD.

Forbes was arrested by Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax April 28 after turning himself in at the county jail.

The charge against Forbes alleges he sold 15 LSD capsules to D. W. Lipp, an agent with the Missouri Highway Patrol, for $30 on April 4, 1974.

He is free on $5,000 bond. Forbes also faces felony charges in Pettis County Circuit Court for possession of a controlled substance, marijuana.

Waste treatment plan approved

The Sedalia Water Board Wednesday night approved final plans for an alum and lime sludge removal facility for the city's south water treatment plant.

The waste removal facility, designed by Black and Veatch, Inc., a Kansas City engineering firm, includes two three and one-half acre lagoons adjacent to Covered Bridge Park on Route U. The lagoons will be fenced and landscaped, according to Herb Taylor, water department manager.

The estimated $260,000 project will comply with a request by the Missouri Clean Water Commission to update the south Sedalia plant and eliminate alum and lime sludge from draining into Flat Creek. Improvements will include construction of the two lagoons as well as pumps, valves, and piping. Construction must be completed by next March to meet federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) requirements, Taylor said.

Wally Mitsven, a representative for Black and Veatch, told board members Wednesday the large lagoons are needed to safely filter alum from the water. He noted it could take 2½ years to fill the lagoons and that they would not emit odor because of their size.

However, Taylor said Thursday the two lagoons are expected to serve approximately 20 years because water flowing into them will be drained off and recycled.

"When you only have alum and sludge being deposited in them, the lagoons will last much longer than if water was allowed to remain in," he explained.

Once the lagoons are filled with waste material, they can either be covered with earth and replaced or be drained and reused. Cost factors will dictate which of the two steps will be taken, Taylor said.

Mitsven also said the engineering firm will advertise the project for prospective bidders within the next few weeks. He estimated the facility could be completed within three months after construction begins.

"I see no problems here at all in regard to EPA requirements," Mitsven said. "Who can guess what EPA requirements will be in a few years, but there will be no discharge of raw material into Flat Creek."

In other business, the board accepted the results of a two-week audit of water department expenditures and revenues for 1974 by Haskins and Sells, a Kansas City accounting firm.

Robert Arnett, a spokesman for the firm, told board members the water department made a $167,000 profit for the year ending March 31. He noted $100,000 of that was due to an adjustment in water rates.

"Despite inflation, expenses here (in the water department) have been kept under tight control. There has been fine internal bookkeeping and improvements have been made in net department income," Arnett said.

In other action, the board decided to accept bids shortly for a well pump building for the city's new 1,600-foot well at Grand and Clinton Road. Building specifications, completed by Temple-Callison Co., include a brick-faced building that will house piping, pump, electrical works, valves and a chlorinator. The building is expected to cost approximately $7,000.

Discussing improvements for the grounds surrounding the well, the board approved a $280 bid by Wolf Construction Co., 204 North Mill, to remove tree stumps from the area.

Ford signs bill altering use of highway funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has signed a bill to permit states to defer payment temporarily of required matching funds in order to make use of some $11 billion in highway construction funds to generate jobs.

Ford said Thursday that he had some reservations about the bill because he strongly opposes in principle deferring payment of matching funds.

But he said, "This one-time exception is made to enable the states to take advantage of the special job-producing highway funds which I released in February and of the additional made available in April."

The President said he was signing the bill so all the states can take advantage of their far share of the special highway funds and get on with projects that will stimulate employment in the construction industry. The measure had been sought by many governors.

Ford pointed out that the measure "contains a tough provision which requires states either to pay up their deferred matching share by the end of 1976 or lose future federal highway grants."

Ford actually signed the bill Wednesday, but it was not announced by the White House until Thursday.

The funds involved are $2 billion in federal-aid highway funds the President ordered released on Feb. 12 and another $9.1 billion released by Congress in April to expedite highway construction and generate employment.

Kennedy rejects CIA involvement

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy has defended his two assassinated brothers against suggestions they were connected with alleged plots to murder Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

The Massachusetts Democrat was asked Wednesday night by newsmen about reports linking the late President Kennedy and the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy to alleged Central Intelligence Agency contingency plans to assassinate Castro in the 1960s.

"I'm not privileged to any particular information," he said. "I'm just satisfied to a moral certainty that any kind of suggestion is inaccurate..."

"I think we have to judge on the basis of their lives, their sense of values. And that's the way I look at it."

"I'm not surprised that there are certain agencies that are trying to pass the buck," Kennedy said, adding that any full response from him or his family would have to wait for the Rockefeller Commission's report on alleged CIA involvement in illegal activities.

Cattlemen's Association to delay filing appeal

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—The American National Cattlemen's Association (ANCA) will wait before filing notice of its intent to appeal a federal court judge's decision to halt the implementation of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) new beef grading standards.

Richard J. Wegener, the Omaha attorney for the Denver-based ANCA, said the association has decided to wait until the government makes its decision on a possible appeal to the U.S. 8th Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis.

Last Thursday, U.S. District Court Judge Robert V. Denney issued a permanent injunction stopping the implementation of the revised grading standards, saying the USDA overstepped its authority and failed to fully analyze the impact the new guidelines would have on the economy.

The ruling came in a suit filed by the Independent Meat Packers Association of Omaha (IMPAO), which claimed the new standards will increase grading, production and transportation costs.

IMPAO was later joined by 10 intervenors, including the National Livestock Feeders Association, The National Restaurant Association, The National Association of Meat Purveyors and several consumer groups.

Most of the vocal opposition to the new standards centers on the lowering of the fat marbling an animal must have to be graded "choice" or "prime."

Marbling, the tiny flecks of fat found in the muscular portion of red meat, is generally felt to be the best indicator of how juicy, tender and tasty the meat will be.

Consumer groups contend the change will mean some cattle now grading "good" will move into the "choice" category, and some now grading "choice" to move into the "prime" category. In effect, they say, consumers will pay higher prices for lower quality meat.

Wholesale prices rise .4% during May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose four-tenths of one per cent in May with most of the increase caused by higher farm prices, chiefly livestock, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

Although still high by historical standards, the increase was moderate when compared with April's 1.5 per cent jump in prices and increases throughout most of 1974.

The report indicated that retail prices are likely to remain stable for at least the next several months as the economy begins to emerge from the recession.

Ford administration officials said the April price surge was temporary and May's moderate increase tended to confirm this.

Despite an upturn in farm prices that began in April, industrial prices were maintained stable, rising only two-tenths of one per cent in May following increases of one-tenth of one per cent in each of the previous two months.

Economists regard industrial prices as a more sensitive barometer of inflation because they fluctuate less than farm prices and therefore have more of an impact on the over-all price structure.
